

From the Editor

This week we celebrate two of the big events in the TV calendar. On Saturday night it's the final of the Eurovision Song Contest, the campest, most over-thetop music contest ever conceived. Fifty years on from Abba's win in the Brighton Dome in 1974, the grand final is fittingly live from Malmo in Sweden. Graham Norton will be providing his usual tongue-in-cheek commentary on BBC1, and Olly Alexander will be representing the United Kingdom.

Turn to page 20 to read veteran music journalist Pete Paphides's take on this year's contest. And if you want to see how the competition has evolved, you can watch the 1974 contest in its entirety on BBC iPlayer, if only to marvel at what a brilliant broadcaster the late, great Katie Boyle was.

The other big moment in the world of television is the Baftas, which are on BBC1 on Sunday night. We caught up with some of the stars of the small screen who have had a particularly good year, as well as celebrating Strictly Come Dancing, which began 20 years ago this month and is nominated in the best entertainment show category.

But Strictly is far from being cosy Saturday-night TV. Craig Revel Horwood, the man who has been on the judging panel from day one, proudly explains that Strictly has always taken risks and pushed the boundaries for two decades.

Elsewhere we have an exclusive episode guide to Doctor Who by the showrunner himself, Russell T Davies, His enthusiasm is infectious and he's clear what he wants from the new series of the sci-fi classic: "I hope it has a new energy. I want it to feel younger, wilder, more lively, a bit more bonkers, more capable of going anywhere."

We can't think of a better programme to precede Eurovision this Saturday night.

issue of cancel culture, the drama covers such timely subjects as sexual predators in the workplace abusing their positions of power, the amorality of certain news outlets and the toxicity of social media.

There have been numerous recent examples of celebrities being cancelled for various misdemeanours but, intriguingly, Moffat first wrote the piece as a play half a dozen years ago. Talking to Radio Times during production, the showrunner explained, "People are going to make those comparisons but there are genuinely none. There isn't a decade when we could have put this on television without people mentioning the last three people to whom something like this had occurred. This is a cycle that simply repeats itself.

"I can say with absolute honesty that Douglas Is Cancelled was written before all of the most recent cases happened. The #MeToo movement started as I was writing it. I was sitting there thinking, 'Oh, my God, really? I'm accidentally current. That's never happened before!"

Gillan confirms that, "Douglas

Is Cancelled was incredibly current when Steven wrote it, and it's even more current now. We are living in a really interesting time with the introduction of social media. There's the threat of immediate cancellation looming over everyone the whole time.

"So, you have to be more mindful, which is not necessarily a bad thing. However, there is also this feeling of unease and slight terror."

MUD STICKS

Hinterland actor Hannah Daniel (below) has teamed up with writer and magistrate Georgia Lee to pen a crime drama. Mudtown centres on a Welsh magistrate whose past with a local crime kingpin threatens to plunge her latest case into personal and professional turmoil. Erin Richards (Gotham) and Tom Cullen (The Gold) take the leads in the six-parter, which is being shot in Welsh (for S4C) and English (for Alibi).

BRUMMIE BOY

Joe Lycett combines his Midlands roots and Travel Man persona for a new Sky series. For Joe Lycett's United States of Birmingham, the comic attempts to visit all 18 of the US places that share a name with his home town, hoping to foster a transatlantic alliance and launch an International Day of Birmingham. The three-part series, due next year, is part of a revamped entertainment slate at Sky, which has ditched Fantasy Football after two series.

GIVING A SCOOBY

Zoinks! More than 20 years since Sarah Michelle Gellar and co's big-screen Scooby-Doo outing, Netflix is lining up a new live-action TV series for the spooky-crime-solving gang. The reboot comes from the producers behind You, Dead Boy Detectives and Chilling Adventures of Sabrina, who remain as yet tight-lipped about who'll step into the Mystery Machine.

THE SAGA CONTINUES

The makers of Poldark are taking on The Forsyte Saga – with Susan Hampshire, who played Fleur in the classic 1960s BBC series, on board as dowager Lady Carteret. Writer Debbie Horsfield says the six-part series, partly a prequel to the first of the novels, puts more female characters centre stage. Millie Gibson (Doctor Who) also stars, with Eleanor Tomlinson (Poldark) and Francesca Annis. ROBIN PARKER

MICHAEL DOUGLAS

The Hollywood star on nepotism, playing an American legend – and why sex scenes are like a well-co-ordinated fight

For his most recent role, Michael Douglas is playing Benjamin Franklin - writer, scientist, inventor and one of the founding fathers of the United States. Apple TV+ drama Franklin, however, explores one of the polymath's lesser-known qualities: diplomacy. Specifically, his efforts in 1776, at the age of 70, to bring France into the American War of Independence - one of the great gambles of his career. It was a character that Douglas, at 79, could relate to. Both in their 70s, the two men are celebrities of their time and

Your father was Kirk Douglas. Was it difficult to emerge from his shadow and make a name for yourself?

uncharted territory...

Oh, very much so. I remember when I first started auditioning and they'd say, "That's just like your dad, that's amazing, just the same expression as your father". But the best part of being second-generation is you understand how the business operates. When I was growing up, I'd see Frank Sinatra, Tony Curtis and Gregory Peck in the house and you'd see their foibles and insecurities, just like real people.

Michael Douglas with his actor dad, Kirk How do you feel about the recent spotlight on so-called "nepo babies" in Hollywood?

I'm a little defensive about that. There was a big article about it in New York Magazine and I thought it was a snarky attack. Whether it's a plumber or electrician or anyone else, I can't think of a business where mothers and fathers don't encourage their children to follow them into it. All three of my kids are actors and I wish them the best, because it's not easy.

As a star of erotic thrillers like Fatal Attraction and Basic Instinct, what's your opinion on the discussion that sex scenes are disappearing from cinema? I'm past the age where I've got to worry about that! But it's interesting with all the intimacy co-ordinators. It feels like executives taking control away from film-makers - but there have been some terrible faux pas and harassment. Sex scenes are like fight scenes, it's all choreographed. In my experience you take responsibility as the man to make sure the woman is comfortable, you talk it through. You say, "OK, I'm gonna touch you here if that's all right". It's very slow but looks like it's happening organically, which is hopefully what good acting looks like.

'Talk of nepo babies? I'm a little defensive about that - all three of my kids are actors' MICHAEL DOUGLAS

How would you describe him as a character?

He was a Renaissance man, but he was also complicated. He was quite a philanderer. I wouldn't have wanted to be his wife! He was quick to anger, with a quick wit. He was an extraordinary guy.

> What do vou think Franklin would have made of US politics today? I think he would be extremely disappointed. He would say that we'd lost our way in the 247 years since we declared our independence. What would deeply concern him is that democracy is an endangered species. He talked a lot about the preciousness of democracy, how it has to be moulded and worked at constantly.

cancer in 2010. How did that affect you - did that brush with mortality make you want to try new things? Probably... I think so - I don't know! Maybe I should do some analysis! I just think that I'm 60 years into my career and sometimes you're idle and you want to find another motivation to do something.

Is that why you took on the role of Benjamin Franklin?

I have never done a period picture before. People are surprised, but my whole career's been pretty contemporary. I'm at a point in my life where I'm trying things I haven't done before; I did Ant-Man because I had never done a green screen [special effects] picture before. And now this was a chance to do a period piece. I had always been a little nervous about how skinny my legs would look in the tights, but I read the script and said "Yeah!".

Benjamin Franklin is an almost mythical figure for many Americans. Did that make it daunting to play him?

I was probably most nervous about the practicalities. I took a good look at his image on the $100 bill and said, "Well, we've got a long way to go here for a resemblance..." We experimented with heavy make-up, but it was going to take a lot of time. So we simplified it.

How did you find the experience of working with green screen on Marvel's Ant-Man?

I found I had a newfound respect for actors who've been doing it for a while! It requires imagination and trust. You've got to express deft-like expressions when there's nothing there and you're not sure if you're overacting or not! But that's before you see it all come together. I found it fun but it's sort of a prequel to AI. I'm glad I had the 60s, 70s and 80s in both lifestyle and career. This virtual stuff is a little overwhelming. I'm still barely using my iPhone. I look at my children as a higher form of human species!

Now that you have ticked off a period piece and green screen, do vou have any other unfulfilled ambitions?

Professionally, no. I'm very proud of my career. In baseball terms, I'd say I've got a good batting average! In terms of what's next: my wife Catherine [Zeta Jones] and I are empty nesters now, so I'd like to focus more on enjoying that.

WHAT IT'S LIKE...

to choose a Bafta winner

How are the Bafta Television Awards decided? Newly elected chair of the Bafta Television Committee, Hilary Rosen, takes us backstage.

IN IT TO WIN IT Anyone can put forward their show. These are then put on an online viewing platform, where all 5,700 Bafta members are invited to watch and vote. This is how we come up with a longlist that the juries consider.

WE NEED EXPERTS! My job is to pick the juries that decide the awards. Each jury has 12 members with a track record, fresh voices, seniority, regionality and so on. We also favour genre experts with experience on relevant shows. We're strict about conflict of interest. You wouldn't get the producer of Taskmaster on a jury if Taskmaster was longlisted.

at UKTV DIVERSITY All jurors are encouraged to consider unconscious bias. As an industry, we are more focused on having a better representative group of people both in front of and behind the camera. But also, you have to be absolutely clear when chairing juries – it's ultimately about creative excellence.

WE THEN NEED A SHORTLIST

As a juror you must watch all the shows in your longlist. It's a big commitment! After that, the jury must agree on a shortlist before voting for the winner. We used to do the juries in person, but now we use Zoom, which allows us to hear from a broader range of people.

DISCUSSIONS CAN BE GEEKY

They can be incredibly forensic. I once chaired the jury for best hair and make-up and they were obsessed with the placement of wigs! Often the conversations are around purpose. Is this a show just like every other show? If it's factual, does it shine a spotlight on an area we don't know about?

AND THE WINNER IS...

Saying things like, "I'm going to vote for this show" is discouraged. We try to keep the conversation broad so we don't aroup-think. The votes are placed electronically so no one knows what's won. There are very few people within Bafta who know the winner. That's why the cameramen never know where to position themselves on the night. They're always roving around hoping to capture the winner! sk

LOVE IN THE DARKEST OF PLACES

VIEWPOINT

TWO OF MY FAVOURITE THINGS

Music and gardening provide calm and perspective in a mad world, says Katie Derham

What a glorious time of year. Sophie Raworth and Monty Don will soon be leading us around the Chelsea Flower Show, and BBC Proms tickets are about to go on sale. Which is possibly the most British sentence I've ever written. We are a nation of gardeners and a nation of music lovers, and I'm unashamedly enthusiastic about both and all the ways they're entwined

- from the way garden design can reflect musical form, to the way gardens are used for performance; how they've inspired composers and even how music can help your garden grow.

Time and again, the shared theme that emerges is how gardening and music make you feel better. I've instinctively known this about music all my life. I was a much nicer teenager to live with after I'd thrashed away at the piano,

'It's become a fundamental need to grow, dig and weed' trying to get my fingers around Chopin nocturnes and pouring all my frustrations into Debussy, and I found my friendship group playing in school orchestras and singing in the choir. Gardening came much later, but it's become a fundamental need for me to grow things, to dig and weed. It's grounding in the truest sense, giving our cluttered world a degree of perspective.

My father was a lifelong gardener, and in later years it was such a lovely thing to share, with cuttings and advice flying back and forth. He died a couple of years ago and it's a huge comfort to hear his voice in my ear now as I ponder whether or not to plant out the tomatoes. Never were music and gardens more important than during the pandemic. Suddenly we couldn't access either in the same way, yet they became crucial to all for solace. I felt it keenly as a Radio 3 presenter, broadcasting from an empty office and interviewing musicians via Zoom. Stuck at home, unable to earn and desperate to engage with audiences in real life, they knew how much the music they were able to record and we could broadcast was soothing millions of listeners, transporting people from the often lonely and frightening day to day. And from the timelessness of music, to the timeless seasonality of our gardens. I was lucky to have one. And never did I appreciate it more. Again... perspective and normality in a mad world.

So what is actually going on inside us to give these feelings of relaxation, joy or purpose? Daisy Fancourt is a professor of psychobiology and epidemiology at UCL and also a keen musician. She told me about numerous studies that show how listening to music leads to reductions in stress hormones like cortisol, and how it can boost releases of dopamine, the neurotransmitter that acts on areas of our brains to trigger pleasure. Some of these studies require participants being monitored in an MRI scanner tricky if you're digging up onions. Other studies show how getting our hands in the soil can boost our immune systems by contact with phytoncides, which help plants fight infections. Add to that the physical exercise, too, and you're adding a lot of ingredients to a recipe for wellbeing.

MY HAPPY PLACE Katie Derham at the

Chelsea Flower Show and (below) with her late father, John

OU CAN TURBO-CHARGE those positive effects with a social component, such as singing in a choir or joining a gardening club. The effects can be dramatic; several European countries are now rolling out a programme of singing groups for women with postnatal depression, with impressive results.

I think, though, that one of the most compelling reasons so many of us are drawn to gardening or to music - or both - is the way they give our brains a welcome break. Just listen to a beautiful melody. Or plant a seed. They're activities that require a singularity of focus, and help us restore our attention in a world that normally assaults our senses with a million distractions.

The wonderful baritone and garden lover Roderick Williams put it so well: "Music and gardening go hand in hand. It is that still small voice of calm. And it is worth preserving."

ECIAL COLLO

Twenty years ago, Strictly Come Dancing shimmied onto our TVs, and the BBC held its breath. So why is it still being nominated for Baftas?

TRICTLY COME DANCING is part of the fabric of the nation. Year in, year out, it's one of the highest-rating shows on TV, drawing in well over six million viewers a week – and more than nine million come the final. There can barely be a person in the country who didn't laugh at former political heavyweight Ed Balls dancing Gangnam style, or weep when the music stopped and deaf actor Rose Ayling-Ellis danced perfectly in time.

Yet when the BBC1 series – a revival of the 70s ballroom show Come Dancing, but with celebrities – launched 20 years ago this week, few expected it to be a hit. Greg Dyke was director-general of the BBC at the time and recalls: "I said, 'It's either going to be a big hit or it's going to be a disaster'. Over the years, it's become an institution. The budget must have doubled, it's sold to 61 countries, they've got the tour and it must be making a bomb for the BBC. But it was a risk, and the people involved in taking that risk should be congratulated."

Alongside Dyke in taking that risk and deserving his congratulations is West End choreographer Craig Revel Horwood, who has been on the judging panel from the outset – back then alongside Len Goodman, Arlene Phillips and Bruno Tonioli. He recalls early conversations with the BBC: "They explained that celebrities would be learning to dance in three weeks and I said, 'That's impossible, that sounds like car-crash television'.

"In my screen test I had to judge footage of two contestants rehearsing. I said, 'She can hardly walk down the stairs, and the professional has the bowest legs I've ever seen'. That couple was Natasha Kaplinsky and Brendan Cole, and they went on to win it.

"By the end of that series it was nail-bitingly exciting," Revel Horwood continues. "It won the hearts and minds of a nation. As for Brendan, we really were archenemies. He was very mouthy and he'd say, 'Oh, what would you know?' So I secretly studied ballroom with Len's wife Sue, because knowledge is power."

Since then, the judging panel has changed several times, as have the professionals and the presenters, with Claudia Winkleman joining Tess Daly when Bruce Forsyth bowed out.

'I told them it sounds like car-crash TV'

CRAIG REVEL HORWOOD

Otherwise, the format has remained the same, apart from subtle changes every year that have helped the show to evolve and stay current.

As Revel Horwood points out, the standard has improved, too: "The celebrity dancers are better – if you look at the first show, they were absolutely dreadful." But the biggest change has been the diversity of the line-up – in particular, the same-sex couples that began with boxer Nicola Adams and Katya Jones in 2020 and are now a staple, with Layton Williams and Nikita Kuzmin (right) reaching the final last year.

Revel Horwood says he pushed for the change to come earlier, but claims there was resistance from on high. "I think we did it one year too late," he says. "I wish we'd been braver sooner, but we're there now. Viewers are more open-minded than we give them credit for.

"Some people will kick up a stink initially, then suddenly they're fine with it and that's how we change the world – from the persecution of gay men to two men dancing on national television."

HARLOTTE MOORE, CHIEF content officer of the BBC, explains: "We were very clear that Strictly was about the ballroom dancing world, which we were trying to hold true to, but I think there was a moment where we thought, 'Why would we not do this?' It made total sense and has become the norm. I don't think there was resistance so much as, 'When's the right timing?' Our audience is very sophisticated and savvy. They get to know the contestants, they learn with them, they become inspired by them. That's how we break through those boundaries of any kind of

bias anyone has.

E SOON MOVED there for the part and ended up sharing a house with Tom Holland, who also starred in Billy Elliot. "I'm from humble beginnings, so even to be in a house that had more than one toilet was crazy to me. I was like, 'Mum, this place is huge – we live in a mansion!' I knew early on that London was going to be the place I would probably settle. I loved being among fabulous people. Also people who were like me. I didn't know many people who were like me in Bury."

After that, he soon booked his second and third auditions. "At this point, I thought auditions were like meetings. You can imagine my fourth one – I asked my agent, 'Don't I start filming soon?' She told me I didn't get the job and I was like, 'Sorry, what?'" he laughs.

In 2008, Williams got his first TV role, in the BBC series Beautiful People alongside Olivia Colman, Sarah Niles and Meera Syal. Funnily enough, it was about two friends, Simon Doonan (Luke Ward-Wilkinson) and Kylie Parkinson (Williams), who had dreams of moving to London.

'I didn't know many people who were like me in Bury'

What was it like playing a queer character when he was only 14 and still learning about himself? "I was very aware I was gay," Williams says, "but I wasn't living in a world that was ready to accept me openly, freely, safely. Even today, it can be scary for kids. It was like art imitating life. It was quite exciting for me to be authentic through that. I decided to make it my superpower." He adds, "Were people going to be pulling me out of the closet as a child?"

It sounds like something that would never happen, but in 2022, Heartstopper actor Kit Connor, revealed he was bisexual on Twitter (now called X), by posting: "I'm bi. Congrats for forcing an 18-year-old to out himself. I think some of you missed the point of the show. Bye."

"The Heartstopper cast are teenagers," Williams says. "We shouldn't have to always disclose [our sexual orientation]. People need to come to those decisions in their own time and explore themselves. Let people be who they want to be. Stop assuming, stop forcing them out of the closet. We need to look in the mirror, because it can sometimes be our community causing this rift. Just be nice and mind your business."

Following stage roles in Matthew Bourne's The Car Man, Hairspray and Rent, in 2021 Williams gave a standout performance as Jamie New in the musical Everybody's Talking about Jamie, based on the real-life story of Jamie Campbell, who set out to pursue a career in drag when he was 16.

THEN IT CAME to performing on Strictly Come Dancing last year, people quickly realised Williams was a triple threat - he could act, sing and dance. But there were some people who said that given his stage background he shouldn't even be on the show. All the backlash was from people online who Williams describes as "keyboard warriors" - no one ever said anything to his face. "If I'm being honest, initially, I was more anti than pro [doing the show], because I was really worried people wouldn't take to me because of my experience," Williams explains. "Then I thought, 'Sod it, why am I trying to dim my shine because of what people are going to think?' What better opportunity to go out there every Saturday night and just serve it up?

"Obviously, I was doing my tricks and my flips and my dips, because that's what I knew I could do from the stage, but people needed to realise that I had not danced like that ever. I'd never done those steps."

There might have been negative comments, but the positive ones more than made up for it. The messages from parents, teachers and young people "gave Nikita and me that ammo to crack on when things got a little bit intense". One mum wrote to thank him because her eight-year-old son was nervous to wear a pink watch to school – thanks to Williams on Strictly, he wore it. "You know when you have that thing as a kid that you're ashamed of? I've been there. I used to have my Little Mermaid doll that I would hide from certain people," Williams says.

"It's never too late to be you," he adds. "It's never too late to dive into your fabulousness, so shout out to those that haven't had the opportunity to fully express themselves yet."

What's it like going back to Bury now to see his mum, nieces and nephews – a place where he didn't always feel comfortable? "I used to be quite agoraphobic and I didn't really like walking around. Now,

I will strut down my estate. I love it, and I'm proud of it. I'm proud of where I'm from. The street is super-supportive now."

Layton Williams is just as warm and unapologetically himself in person as he is on TV – and that representation matters. Wear the pink watch. Because take it from Williams: "Life isn't a dress rehearsal. Go out there and do the damn thing!"

MY FIRST TV MEMORY I was obsessed with Xena: Warrior Princess and a sucker for The Story of Tracy Beaker.

I'VE LEARNT To be multifaceted and have fingers in as many pies as possible, so I have a long, sustainable career. Fingers crossed!

MY HEROES ARE My friends. You can meet your heroes and be disappointed – my besties are the people who inspire me. Some of them are in the industry, too, like John McCrea [who starred in Everybody's Talking about Jamie prior to Williams] and Liam Mower [one of three boys who played the original Billy Elliot]. Kedar Williams-Stirling [Sex Education] and I were besties in school. Having people that have known you before all of the madness is really important.

NEXT Layton ♂ Nikita Live! on 30 June at Manchester's Bridgewater Hall, and 16 July at London's Theatre Royal Drury Lane.

HEN JONATHAN BAILEY was five, he went to see Oliver! at the London Palladium. "That was it," he says. "You realise the impact of being exposed to things at a certain age. That trip was completely transformative to me. I was like, 'What the hell's going on? They look like they're having such good fun!"

By the age of eight, he was starring as Gavroche in the West End production of Les Misérables. Now 36, how has he stayed so grounded having been in the industry from such a young age? He's quick to point out that the spotlight only really shone on him when he was 32. Despite success in stage shows from Othello to a gender-swapped Company, and substantial parts in Broadchurch, WIA and Michaela Coel's Chewing Gum, he only found global fame in 2020 for his portrayal of Viscount Anthony Bridgerton in the Netflix hit.

"When people perceive a moment of success, it can be a very vulnerable moment personally," he reflects. "It's important to have mentors to remind you there have been so many actors

'To normalise it so it's not talked about would be great'

before you, there'll be many after, and so many people who are similar to you, although I don't feel like I've ever been trapped in comparison."

Bailey was praised for being an out gay leading man, who woos Kate Sharma (Simone Ashley) in the steamy Shondaland series. "It's funny, it doesn't always feel like a big deal, but when the impact is positive, which it has been, it's great."

For his follow-up role in the Paramount+series Fellow Travellers, which aired last year, based on the book by Thomas Mallon, his character Timothy Laughlin embarks on a decadeslong love affair with Hawkins Fuller (Matt Bomer). They meet in the 1950s at the height of McCarthyism in Washington DC, and the series takes us up to the Aids crisis of the 1980s.

You'd presume having had such a hit under his belt, he'd no longer need to audition for roles but, he says, "I'm glad I had to fight for it. It allows you to feel confident that you can do it, especially if you're like me and suspect sometimes you can't. I'm driven by that."

The show portrays same-sex intimacy beautifully. Are we seeing more of that on screen? "I think so. It's all rooted in narrative. To normalise it so it's not talked about would be great. I'm surprised when that's the only thing someone takes from a show like Fellow Travellers. There's a wealth of other things going on."

Russell T Davies, who has been championing gay stories for more than 25 years, gave the series high praise, describing it as "devastating, gripping, hot, brilliant and absolutely wonderful landmark TV... and the most brilliant cast".

"I love Russell," Bailey says. "One day, I hope to work with him. He's not only a trailblazer in the work that he does, like with Queer as Folk, but he supports so many people in the industry. I just want to do him proud.

I have a Russell T Davies test: 'What would Russell say?'"

He's clearly passed the test with his most recent work, and it seems the spotlight upon him will keep shining with series three of *Bridger*ton, as well as the film adaptation of Wicked, where he plays Prince Fiyero, coming later this year. At one point, Bailey was filming Bridgerton, Wicked and Fellow Travellers all at the same time, spending more than a month flying back and forth between the UK and Canada.

AILEY SAYS HE has always followed theatre director Nicholas Hytner's advice to "just keep working". "What he means by that is just keep moving on, which is an amazing Stephen Sondheim lyric [in Move On from Sunday in the Park with George]. It's about not getting caught up in the stagnant moments that are inevitable." It doesn't sound like Bailey will be having one of those any time soon.

Series three of Bridgerton is on Netflix from 16 May

N 2021, A YEAR before Disney+'s series The Bear raised our anxiety levels, there was the similarly stressful film Boiling Point, set in a restaurant kitchen and all shot in one take. It was made on a minimal budget and Vinette Robinson, 39, who starred in it with Stephen Graham, says no one expected it to be such a hit. "We just made this little film for the love of it, and then it had this incredible response." It was turned into a BBC series in 2023, and Robinson returned as Carly, now a head chef.

It was Graham, his wife Hannah Walters (who also stars) and director Philip Barantini who wanted Robinson for the role. Graham and Walters saw her in Steven Knight's A Christmas Carol as Bob Cratchit's wife Mary. "They really championed me. They help a lot of people on camera and off camera that you'd never know about. They're really paying it forward, which is inspiring, giving people opportunities who wouldn't normally get them."

Robinson grew up on a council estate in Bradford, where the idea of becoming an actor never crossed her mind. Until, that is, she was 13. In her school English class, she had to dramatise poems, and her teacher entered one that Robinson and her friend did into a local festival. She recalls it feeling electric up on that stage.

"As soon as I said I wanted to be an actor, my mum was the only one who was behind me. Everyone else was like, 'You're mad. This career is not for you.' I had some pretty horrendous feedback from certain drama schools, who were horrible to me. When I went to audition, they told me I didn't know enough and some were really snobby. Without that belief from my mum at home, I wouldn't have felt confident or believed I could do it."

With Stephen Graha

2021 film Boiling Po

Robinson had not one, but several, bursaries to cover her fees at London's Webber Douglas Academy of Dramatic Art, as well as her living expenses. She also worked all the way through drama school. "You only get people from certain backgrounds who can afford to do this job," Robinson says of the lack of schemes available now. "A wide range of voices just enrich the industry. It's about going into different communities and schools, and not just private schools that can afford to do drama as a luxury, because that's where you will find a variety of people. It's fundamental that everyone has access to the arts in whatever form that may be, because it expands people's lives."

'It's fundamental that everyone has access to the arts'

HE STORIES THAT are told are in the hands of the television commissioners. "It drives me mad," Robinson says, to see programmes where people are shown having a horrible time just because they're from a working-class background. She mentions Michaela Coel's council-estate-set Chewing Gum as an antidote to that. "I would never have thought I could be a commissioner. How do we reach different communities to get them into those jobs as well?"

"I had huge amounts of imposter syndrome – as I know loads of people do in this industry – just coming from the background I do. It's such a tough industry and I always felt like I had to change myself or be something different. Then I realised that just gets in the way of the work."

Robinson has played everything from a shop assistant in Cold Feet and a police sergeant in Sherlock to Rosa Parks in Doctor Who. Her next role is a helicopter parent in Channel 4's The Gathering, which examines the rivalry between teen gymnasts, and their socio-economic backgrounds. "I'm really proud of it," Robinson says. "I really believe in the power of storytelling. Look at Mr Bates vs the Post Office and the dialogue it opened up. Television drama can reach into people's living rooms and make them think differently about an issue.

"It's really easy to diminish what we do, because we're not saving lives, but that doesn't mean that it's not important. We need stories to make sense of this human experience."

The Gathering starts Tue 9pm C4

Friends. My brother and I would get home from school and play it on repeat. We'd have a packet of sweets and a fizzy pop. Joey is my favourite character. He comes out with some stupid stuff, but he makes me laugh.

MY BIG BREAK WAS

Playing for England. Winning the Women's Euros in 2022 was a fantastic moment for the team and took women's football to the next level. Then, after that, I went on to win I'm a Celebrity... Get Me Out of Here! and was exposed to a whole new TV audience.

WHAT I'VE LEARNT

To listen to the people that matter – especially in the world of social media, where everybody feels like they can have an opinion on different things. Sometimes it can really impact your day, so if I do punditry or something else work-wise, I get feedback from people in the industry rather than people on the outside.

RITAIN FOR THE WIN? Could it be Olly this year? It doesn't take a genius to figure out why the BBC Eurovision selection committee almost bit off Olly Alexander's hand when he dropped them a line last summer. Lest we forget, these past decades, the Chernobyl Tourist Board has had more luck filling charter flights than we've had at getting actual pop stars to compete in the event.

Former pop stars? Well, that's a different story. Blue sang I Can in 2011, only to find that, actually, when it came to landing a top ten placing, they couldn't. Bonnie Tyler spent much of the 2013 final holding out for something more than a zero, finally scraping a paltry 23 points. Future pop stars? Sure, Sam Ryder became a household name in 2022 thanks to his cosmological crie de coeur, Space Man. But when newly solo Years & Years frontman Olly Alexander takes to the stage in Malmo this Saturday to sing Dizzy, he will do so as someone whose band's most-recent album, Night Call, landed at number one in the first of its 23-week run in the UK charts.

To understand why Eurovision can now attract a pop star at the top of his game, we need to step back and look at what, almost by stealth, Eurovision has become over the past 25 years. A tournament that was once a byword for naffness, synonymous with sexless balladeering, baffling schlager ditties and cabaret corn, has become the music television event of the year. In the UK last year, it secured its highest audience share since records began, while over in Sweden almost a third of the population saw their country triumph with Loreen's pneumatic power ballad, Tattoo. The staging of the event has evolved to mirror its growing importance, with this year's production designers having worked on Beyoncé's Renaissance tour and Abba Voyage. What you'll see when you tune in is the most ambitious presentation the contest has ever seen: a cross-shaped stage positioned in the middle of the Malmo Arena made up of moveable LED cubes and floors.

Right at the centre of that revolution is the music itself. As we go to press, the bookmakers' favourite is Swiss offering The Code by singing,

'There's something unusual about Olly. He's like a sprite. Or a devil...'

RUSSELL T DAVIES

rapping, violin-playing force of nature Nemo, in which they detail the turbulent journey to realising their non-binary identity. Also in the frame is Croatia's Baby Lasagna, whose stirring immigration anthem Rim Tim Tagi Dim issues a powerful reminder that sublime and ridiculous don't have to sleep in separate beds. "Ay, I'm a big boy now," intones the Croat poet. "I'm going away and I sold my cow."

When it comes to risk-taking pop, the Swiss and Croatian entries are by no means alone. As Eurovision memoirist William Lee Adams explains, "More than any other year, Eurovision 2024 is a wild rodeo ride.

You've got Angelina Mango from Italy singing Cumbia music with hot, spicy passion and then there's Joost from the Netherlands with Europapa, a bonkers but passionate anthem to free movement around Europe."

Perhaps it's finally time to set aside our accumulated memories of the whimsical commentary box put-downs that came as standard in the days when Terry Wogan was our guide to the madness on stage. Just because we thought that Eurovision was naff, it didn't mean other countries felt that way.

According to Dr Dean Vuletic, author of Postwar Europe and the Eurovision Song Contest, the very question itself says a lot about the way we still view ourselves, with perhaps a certain sense of entitlement when it comes to our status as a pop nation. He mentions the response in 1968 when Cliff Richard's Congratulations lost out to Spain by just one point, prompting newspapers to imply that Spanish state television had rigged the vote on behalf of General Franco's fascist regime: "All that soft power you didn't know you had, because you never lacked it? The visibility Britain had through its language and its pop culture - for other countries, there are few international platforms that allow them to have that same visibility."

Y CONTRAST, VULETIC talks about the way Abba's Waterloo suddenly amplified Sweden's reach after the 1974 contest. "No country has done better out of Eurovision than Sweden with Abba. Prior to Abba, Sweden was not a power when it came to popular culture. Now its third-biggest export industry is popular music. And when you combine that with the soft power potential of companies such as H&M and Ikea, then that's pretty amazing."

What Sweden seemed to realise accidentally with Abba's victory 50 years ago was something that the group themselves knew all along – that this could be the cannon that would blast them to huge international success. That when the world is watching, you need to supplant all their preconceptions about you and replace them with something way better. Abba studied the British pop charts and set about planning their moment like a world-class bank robber would plan a heist. Bjorn Ulvaeus recalls, "I know that we wanted to pack it with energy. It's all energy, energy, energy. That was during the glam-rock era and groups like Slade and Sweet, those British bands... All those records were so full of energy. And we wanted to pack that much energy into Waterloo as well."

In a poll conducted by BBC1 for the channel's 2020 TV special Eurovision: Come Together, Waterloo was voted the greatest Eurovision song of all time, followed by Conchita Wurst's 2014 winner Rise like a Phoenix. ▷ ten for the Swindon branch of Samaritans. Our drummer's brother worked there, and they needed a theme tune for their 50th-anniversary celebrations. So our guitarist Kimberley Rew wrote it and we shoved it in the bottom drawer, thinking it was too Eurovision to put on one of our records. So when we got an approach to submit a song, we submitted it."

Leskanich remains proud of Love Shine a Light, but adds that "so much of what happens to power and he was hugely popular across Europe. All that stuff plays a part."

In other words, context and politics matter. Without it, would Ukraine's Kalush Orchestra have secured an outright win in 2022 for their entry Stefania? The prospect of three minutes broadcasting to an entire continent is a chance to influence the narrative - and occasionally, argues Adams, turn Eurovision into a propaganda tool. By way of example, he cites A Million Voices, Russia's 2015 near-winner by Polina Gagarina - who subsequently became a prominent figure at pro-Putin rallies - which he muttered: "Ukraine just want to be sure that the old electricity and the oil flows through."

"Anyone who feels that politics has no place in Eurovision probably hasn't been paying that much attention," says Adams when asked about calls from Swedish musicians such as Robyn and First Aid Kit to exclude Israel's Eden Golan from this year's contest. Golan's song was originally called October Rain and featured lyrics directly referencing Hamas's 7 October attack on Israel, but was rejected by the Eurovision Broadcasting Union, prompting a new lyric that now answers to the name of Hurricane.

Eurovision has always, to a greater or lesser extent, acted as a detailed tapestry of what's happening across the continent at any given time. That has been a constant going back to the very first contest in 1956, when West Germany fielded an entry by Holocaust survivor Walter Andreas Schwarz with a self-composed autobiographical song in the chanson style whose title translates as Luckily in the Waiting Room.

о ноw веsт to think of Eurovision and the place it holds in the collective psyche? Rather like Camp chicory coffee and those people who walk around pubs with a tray of seafood, if we didn't already have it, no one would invent it. It's a space that exists to be claimed by anyone who needs it badly enough. And since 1998, when Dana International emerged victorious with Diva, the biggest driver of Eurovision's resurgence has been the visibility of LGBTQ+ singers in the contest.

The sight of the Israeli singer emerging victorious that May night had an unforgettable effect on the then nine-year-old Rylan, watching in Stepney, east London. "I didn't entirely understand why it was such a big deal," recalls the Radio 2 presenter, who was a member of the UK's song selection committee this year. "But then to find out, obviously, that Dana was trans... my brain was a bit, like, 'Oh, so that woman has not always been a woman'. That was my first connection with Eurovision, seeing everyone talking about it. It was fun, but also there was a sort of gravity to that moment." The success of Diva is a splash whose ripples continue to push outwards and was followed by winning turns from Serbia's Marija Serifovic in 2007 and Austria's Conchita Wurst in 2014. If anything, then, it feels overdue that finally

EUROVISION 2024

He's more interesting than that. But Eurovision keeps changing - just when you think it's all about big ballads and key changes, along comes Netta [the defiantly outlandish Israeli 2018 winner]. So my hopes are high!"

LEXANDER HIMSELF SAYS he has "put all thoughts of winning to one side". Expectation management is wise at this stage. Although the surging happy-sad Europop of Dizzy will surely see his star rise across Europe - with a projected 200 million streams of the song on just that one night current betting doesn't have Alexander right up there with the leaders. But as Rylan points out, "A lot can change in the fortnight leading up to the contest. Staging is definitely a factor."

Regardless of what happens on the night, as Alexander says, "It really isn't about coming first. So many Eurovision moments that have stayed with me and inspired me happened with songs that didn't even go beyond the semi-finals. That's not what it's about."

So what is it ultimately about? "It's not real life," says Adams. "It's the opposite. For three minutes on the Eurovision stage, everything is perfect. This is a moment where you can put aside all the drama, all the trauma, sing your heart out and be appreciated. Because every Eurovision performance - whether it's difficult, whether it's easy - ends with applause."

New viewers, this way! Doctor Who should always have an open door for people who have never seen it before. We can rely on the faithful fans and that huge bedrock of casual viewers who think of the show with a smile but, beyond that, there's always a new generation being born, or people who have somehow looked the other way. And this time, with the programme being streamed on Disney+ outside the UK (where available), there are huge reefs of new viewers who might never have heard the word "Tardis" before.

So there's a new Doctor, played by Ncuti Gatwa. And a new companion, Ruby Sunday, played by Millie Gibson, who's there to ask all the questions you might want answering, like "Why do all these aliens speak English?" (It's the Tardis translation circuits, as we've always said, but this time we actually get to see them working!) And beyond that, I hope the show has a new energy. I want it to feel younger, wilder, more lively, a bit more bonkers, more capable of going anywhere. And bigger with its laughs and leaps and lunacy, while still holding tight to the old traditions, giving us scares that will fold themselves away into the unlit corners of our minds for Far away in time and space, on the colony world Pacifico del Rio, trouble is brewing in orbit, miles above the citizens' heads. And when the Doctor takes Ruby on her first trip to the far future, they discover not only the puzzle of the Space Babies, but a terrifying Bogeyman and a secret that needs unravelling before time runs out. Guest star Golda Rosheuvel steps out of Queen Charlotte's robes in Bridgerton to play Jocelyn, a mysterious woman who might help save the day... or bring disaster.

The last time we saw Ruby Sunday, she was stepping aboard the Tardis on Christmas Day 2023, with no idea who the Doctor is, or how or why or anything. So this is her baptism of fire, not to mention a crash course in the basics of Doctor Who.

In 1952, Ray Bradbury wrote A Sound of Thunder, a short story that suggested stepping on a butterfly in the past could change your destiny in the future. And Ruby's about to discover exactly what that means!

FA CUP FINAL

WOMEN ROCKING WEMBLEY

Women's football has come of age – and this Cup final will be a thriller, says Simon Barnes

It's Always been said that football is the game of the people. The former Chelsea midfielder of the 1960s and 70s Alan Hudson wrote a book about the sport called The Working Man's Ballet, which says it all. These days, however, an awful lot of football is only available to the privileged. If you want to watch all the Premier League and Champions League fixtures that are available on TV, you must pay for three subscriptions – and some RT research before this season started told us that the annual cost for that was a minimum of £887.64. Men's football is increasingly out of reach of the working man and woman, but something else is rising up to take its place.

Women's football. You can watch many Women's Super League fixtures free-to-air on BBC TV, and the climax of the year's action is the FA Cup final, to be contested this time by Manchester United and Tottenham Hotspur.

'Earps v England... the final won't be short on star power'

It's shocking to realise how recent all this is. In the 2023/24 season, the Women's Super League has seen the number of spectators go past the million mark for the first time, beating the previous annual record of 689,297 attendances with several weeks to spare.

And, of course, the Women's FA Cup final will be played at Wembley. It has only been held there since 2015, when it pulled in just over 30,000 spectators. Before that, the fixture was something of an orphan. In successive seasons from 2009 it was held in Derby, Nottingham, Coventry, Bristol, Doncaster and Milton Keynes. "From Milton Keynes to Wembley" is a symbolic journey of the kind you usually see from the competition's teams.

How quickly the appetite for watching women's football has grown. Last year, 77,390 people turned up to see Chelsea beat Manchester United by a single goal to claim the silverware for a third year running. On Sunday, there will be a new name on the trophy, as neither United nor Spurs has won before – and Wembley Stadium will be shaking.

How odd it is to remember that the Women's FA Cup has only existed as an official competition since 1970 – and, for that matter, that the Manchester United women's team was only founded as recently as 2018. No doubt before then, the owners couldn't see how a women's team would make money, but realised belatedly that these days a club without a women's team looks a bit silly... to put it mildly.

ESPITE THE 2024 finalists each seeking their maiden Cup win, the match will certainly not be short on star power. Mary Earps, the Manchester United and England goalkeeper, was the popular winner of the BBC Sports Personality of the Year Award and played successive blinders in the FA Cup quarter- and semi-finals. "I watch myself and I think that ain't even me!" she said. So don't be surprised if she plays a key role in Sunday's proceedings.

It's a match-up that shows the increasingly competitive nature of the WSL. The established powers are finding themselves challenged as never before. Manchester United and Spurs are fourth and sixth in the league as I write. Chelsea fell in the semis after a 2–1 thriller against Manchester United, with Rachel Williams scoring the winner after a miracle or two from Earps.

As for Spurs, they beat Leicester City by the same scoreline to make the final. Bethany England (who also plays for England) is their centre-forward, signed from Chelsea in January 2023 for a rumoured record sum of as much as £250,000 (so not quite at parity with the men's game, then).

After her move, she scored 13 times in the next 14 games. She's back from injury and playing with increasing confidence; all centre-forwards are better for a bit of swagger. Against Sheffield United, earlier in the competition, Spurs were 2–0 down, but England scored twice in 11 minutes and her team then found a late winner.

So let's enjoy the occasion:
England v Earps, a new team name inscribed on the trophy and all the action on the BBC. This final will be something to savour.

EMERGENCY SURGERY

HELP SUPPORT OUR MEDICAL TEAMS TODAY

A man carries a wounded child into the MSF-run clinic at Rafah Indonesian Field Hospital in southern Gaza, 27 December 2023. Photograph @ MSF

DR BIRSEN GASKELL IS AN ANAESTHETIST RECENTLY RETURNED FROM GAZA.

"We arrived in Gaza and were immediately confronted by huge numbers of people crammed into the streets. You can hear the bombing and you can see the fear in people's faces.

We immediately got to work at the hospital. We treated a large number of patients for burns and trauma injuries, mostly people who'd been injured in explosions. There were a lot of children. I'd never seen so many burns patients in one place.

Some children were malnourished and it was clear many were not eating properly. With post-operative care, it's vital that patients have a good diet to assist with tissue healing, but due to food shortages that just wasn't happening.

We were seeing around 180 patients every day. We didn't have the capacity to take everybody into the operating theatres - some procedures had to be carried out on the ward.

As an anaesthetist, one of my roles was to improve pain management. Due to shortages of medical supplies, there have been a lot of incidents during this conflict when people have been operated on without anaesthetics. It's inconceivable that this has happened, but it has.

Some patients stick in your mind. There was a nineyear-old girl who'd been injured when her home was bombed and lost part of her jaw. She and her mother were the only survivors from their family. I changed her dressing every few days and gave her antibiotic treatment. One day, she gave me a hug and asked if she'd ever look normal. I didn't have an answer for her. Reconstructive surgery would really help her, but nothing like that is on offer in Gaza.

The situation in Gaza is getting worse and people's medical needs are growing. The fact that there are people there who have had to undergo medical procedures without anaesthesia is barbaric. It's an inhumane situation.

Yet, despite the carnage and the horror, the MSF hospital was an oasis of calm. I was so impressed by the Gazan staff, by their resilience. Many had lost family members and were living in tents, but they were still there every day, helping people.

The work MSF is doing in Gaza is needed now more

WE CAN'T OPERATE WITHOUT YOU

Every year, MSF teams carry out tens of thousands of surgeries. From treating war wounds to emergency caesareans and reconstructive surgery, our surgeons are at the frontline of our lifesaving care.

In 2022, MSF teams around the world conducted more than 118,000 major surgeries. In the places where we work, demand for surgical services has never been higher. We need your support now more than ever to provide people with lifesaving medical care.

Please donate today to support our emergency medical teams.

£40 can provide six patients with antibiotics to prevent infections after surgery

£420 covers the cost of an MSF surgeon working in a hospital for five days

£170 could pay for emergency splints to immobilise injured limbs for 20 patients

THANK YOU

100% of the funding for our work comes from private donors. It's your support that enables us to provide emergency medical care.

SOMETIMES THE TRUTH HURTS

Turning your own life into a television series can invite painful scrutiny

My friend Chris once told me a story about his flatmate Adam, who in his early 20s was beaten up by a bunch of thugs, possibly because of his long blond hair. As he lay in the road being kicked, Adam found some consolation in thinking, "This will be great in my book." That young man went on to become a successful novelist, and I've been reminded of him this week by all the hoo-ha over Baby Reindeer.

Few will have escaped the frenzy around the Netflix adaptation of Richard Gadd's one-man play, telling the story of failing comedian Donny and his stalker Martha. Such a bare synopsis

'We've come a long way from the clichés of the bunny boiler' doesn't do justice to this layered, compassionate, brutally honest seven-part drama, with award-worthy performances from Jessica Gunning as Martha and Gadd himself playing Donny. Except it's as much Gadd's own story we're learning as Donny's, and this is where it gets tricky.

As the show speedily topped the Netflix chart on both sides of the Atlantic, internet sleuths ignored Gadd's pleas to leave well alone, and soon tracked down the real-life characters

Within a week, the woman reported to be the inspiration for Martha had given an interview, unidentified, to a national newspaper, claiming to be the real victim. I sense this will run and run.

Gadd is by no means the first to follow Carrie Fisher's famous advice: take your broken heart and make it into art. As Nora Ephron reflected after her husband left her for another woman and she siphoned her misery into the box-office hit Heartburn, "Everything is copy".

Baby Reindeer's arrival on Netflix came shortly before the release of Taylor Swift's latest collection of autobiographical odes to lost loves. Her album The Tortured Poets Department has broken all Spotify records, with millions of fans rushing to identify the celebrity subjects of her lyrics. Besides all her other talents. Swift's career has been built on her alchemy of creating universal anthems from personal intimacy, with her romantic partners judged fair game. And being immortalised in song by the world's premier singer-songwriter is no bad thing, is it? Certainly, Swift's one-time squeeze Harry Styles has never complained about being compared to James Dean in the unsubtly titled Style.

What's different about Baby Reindeer is that these people don't inhabit Swift and Styles's glittery world. At least one person has been wrongly identified as Gadd's male abuser and has received devastating treatment. And Martha is clearly as much victim as villain and, in 2024, evokes as much sympathy as contempt. We've come a long way from the clichés of Glenn Close's bunny boiler in Fatal Attraction.

Y DIFFICULTY IS with Gadd's decision to take his story to the world's biggest TV station to relive a chapter of his life fuelled by reckless self-sabotage. He's perfectly entitled to do so - he's spoken about the catharsis it has brought him, and the help he hopes it brings others. I can only say that the one person I know to have properly suffered the attentions of a stalker wouldn't have wished to revisit its horror in a million years, or risk smoking out the perpetrator as Gadd has seemingly done. His desire for creative fulfilment and, yes, attention, has trumped other concerns. It's always a relief when the end credit comes up, "No animals were harmed during the making of this programme." If only we could guarantee the same for people.

All seven episodes of Baby Reindeer are available to watch now on Netflix

THRILLER Bodkin

All 7 episodes available from 9 May The trope of the sleepy Irish coastal town that harbours dark secrets is turned over and given a good shake by this sly comedy thriller, executiveproduced by Michelle and Barack Obama. Three podcasters arrive in Bodkin, determined to investigate the disappearance of three people some years ago. While the locals repeatedly puncture these interlopers' pompous pretensions to be serious journalists, it does seem that the annoying trio may have hit upon something. Behind a lot of funny gags about media types coming a cropper in the sticks is a deepening mystery. JS

DRAMA Supernova ★★★ ID Available now

Harry Macqueen's elegiac story of later-life love between a middle-aged couple follows laconic English pianist Sam (Colin Firth) and his partner Tusker (Stanley Tucci), a more gregarious expat-American. As they drive through stunning Lake District scenery on their way to stay with old friends, the couple's warm bickering gradually makes clear that one of them is terminally ill, and this get-together is to be their last. While the story lacks an element of surprise, Firth and Tucci are on top form, making this a journey well worth taking. Pippa Haywood and James Dreyfus also feature. AC

DRAMA The Mauritanian ★★★★ ⑮

Available now

Kevin Macdonald's Baftanominated drama is a full-blooded adaptation of the memoir of Guantanamo detainee Mohamedou Ould Slahi. Tahar Rahim plays the Mauritanian engineer who was arrested in 2001, then held and tortured without charge until 2016. Jodie Foster is the defence attorney who takes on his case and faces off with Benedict Cumberbatch's army prosecutor. Macdonald stages the torture scenes without apology, in a film that reminds us of the bad things that can happen behind closed doors. ANDREW COLLINS

A luxury cruise populated by the super-rich proves fertile ground for Swedish film-maker Ruben Ostlund in this barbed satire. Passengers include a Russian oligarch and a model couple (Charlbi Dean and Harris Dickinson, below). Woody Harrelson is the Marxism-spouting skipper who has dinner with his paymasters, which then erupts into scatological chaos. The film is on the lengthy side, but it's every bit as bracingly entertaining as you would expect from the director of Force Majeure and The Square. JEREMY ASPINALL

COMEDY

Unfrosted ★★★ Available now

Jerry Seinfeld makes his directorial debut with this entertainingly silly look at the invention of the Pop-Tart. Set in the 1960s, the film charts the race between Kellogg's and rival company Post as they compete to create a delicious new breakfast food. Seinfeld stars as Kellogg's employee Bob Cabana, alongside Melissa McCarthy as a Nasa scientist working for the company and Hugh Grant as an actor playing Tony the Tiger. There are some laugh-out-loud moments, but the story is almost entirely fictional, which does a disservice to the real creators of the sugary snack. LAURA RUTKOWSKI

Where the Crawdads Sing ★★ * Available now

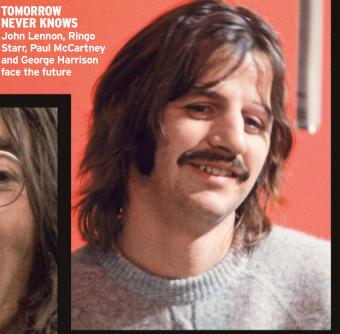

This good-looking but tonally misjudged melodrama is an adaptation of the novel by Delia Owens. Kya Clark (Normal People's Daisy Edgar-Jones) is an isolated woman living in the North Carolina marshes in the 1960s. A relationship with Tate (Taylor John Smith) offers the potential for happiness, but then Kya is accused of murdering a former star quarterback (Harris Dickinson). What should have been a murky trawl through small-town suspicion instead feels sanitised and poorly fleshed out, while any attempt to make the audience swoon borders on the farcical. EMMA SIMMONDS

MUSIC DOCUMENTARY Let It Be ★★★★ □

Available Wednesday 8 May

Originally arranged as rehearsals for a one-off live show, the "Get Back" sessions proved to be the most directionless and destructive of the Beatles' career. With all four already pursuing personal projects, the tensions that would cause the final split were clearly in evidence from the start. Yet, as Michael Lindsay-Hogg's 1970 cinéma-vérité record proves, the band was still capable of producing classic pop music, with the impromptu back-to-basics performance on the roof of the Apple building being the highlight. Astonishingly honest in its revelations, this underrated and Oscarwinning film has now been remastered by Peter Jackson's production company in the wake of The Beatles: Get Back, his eight-hour 2021 docuseries that also drew on Lindsay-Hogg's footage. It offers a saddening, but pointedly intentional insight into the end of a dream. DAVID PARKINSON

SCI-FI

Dark Matter

Episode 3 available from Wednesday Thanks to the likes of Doctors Strange and Who, the notion of a multiverse isn't as obscure as it once was. In fact, sci-fi shows are now going potty for the concept, having realised that alternate versions of characters permit the exploration of such major themes as regret and existential angst. Writer Blake Crouch has certainly gone all-in on the multiverse madness in Dark Matter, what with the two Jasons currently being trapped in each other's lives. One appears happier about this than the other, and it's hard to predict who will ultimately end up where. DAVID BROWN

DRAMA

Franklin Ep 8 available Friday

A necessarily very talky historical drama concludes, which means more or less a solid hour of men in wigs firing erudite putdowns at each other. But as an agreement between France and the nascent United States finally nears, there are rapprochements between former enemies who realise their personal animosities are unimportant, and comeuppances for friends whose loyalty was for sale. If you've come this far it's a typically elegant and thoughtful denouement, with Michael Douglas calm and commanding as Benjamin Franklin. JACK SEALE Ten questions: page 8

All 8 episodes available Friday

Don't read on if you've yet to watch episode six, which reveals the major twist. But if you have, you'll be aware that Sugar (Colin Farrell) is no mere Hollywood PI but an alien. Wild, right? This finale doesn't boast surprises on that level, but there are further plot pivots that are unforeseen. And as for the sci-fi stuff, wouldn't it be fun if other shows now took this approach? After 60 years, Ken Barlow could be revealed to be an extraterrestrial. I can just see the headlines now about a Close Encounter of the Corrie kind. DB

SCI-FI DRAMA Outer Range

Series 2 available from Thursday

A wilfully confusing mash-up of Western drama and time-bending science fiction returns for a second season, with that big hole still there on the land of grizzled rancher Royal Abbott (Josh Brolin). Is the bottomless pit simply a portal to the past and future, or does it have more to say about the family relationships at the heart of the series? Season one revelations included that a character is much older than we thought and two others are the same person; things are about to get a whole lot weirder. JACK SEALE

ROMANTIC COMEDY

The Idea of You ★★★ 🗉

Anne Hathaway is a delight in this enjoyable romcom. She plays Solène, a 40-year-old, recently divorced mum. At Coachella festival with her teenage daughter, she bumps into Hayes Campbell (Nicholas Galitzine), a heart-throb from a successful boy band. Despite their age difference, the two hit it off, but is it love? The film is tame in comparison to Robinne Lee's novel, and the on-off romance is overly familiar. But the leads sizzle, and there are enough spicy moments to set pulses racing. JAYNE NELSON

DRAMA Rebus

All episodes available from Friday

The previous ITV versions of Rebus felt slightly reticent about depicting the Edinburgh detective's flaws, but this latest BBC series has no such qualms. From his opening scene, star Richard Rankin pursues John Rebus's often questionable moral code as he tangles with gangster Ger Cafferty (Stuart Bowman). The scene sets the tone for what feels like a harder-edged interpretation of lan Rankin's bestselling books – and one that will satisfy fans more than the adaptations featuring either John Hannah or Ken Stott. DAVID BROWN

COMEDY ADVENTURE Riddle of Fire ★★★ 🖸

Available now

Thanks to its dreamy synth soundtrack and hazy imagery, this action-adventure film evokes the nostalgia of 1970s movies such as Escape to Witch Mountain. Two children (played by Charlie Stover and Skyler Peters) and their friend (Phoebe Ferro) embark on a guest to find a speckled egg, which leads them to a magical mountain inhabited by fairies - some good, some bad. The script contains some jarring dialogue, but the young stars are clearly enjoying themselves in a refreshingly sweet, if potty-mouthed, fairy tale. JAYNE NELSON

The End We Start From

★★★ I Available now

This subdued survival film works best as an acting showcase for Jodie Comer. She plays a woman who gives birth to her first child just as London is hit by catastrophic floods. She and her husband (Joel Fry) decamp to the country, but a series of traumatic incidents result in mother and baby undertaking a perilous iourney for shelter. Director Mahalia Belo eschews big set pieces in favour of a more considered approach. It's slow, but Comer is exceptional. PATRICK CREMONA

BIOGRAPHICAL DRAMA Bob Marley: One Love

★★ 12 Available now

Reggae icon Bob Marley's life is captured in this misfiring biopic that traces his stratospheric rise to become one of the most important voices of his generation. Kingsley Ben-Adir impresses as Marley, as does Lashana Lynch as Rita, the wife by his side throughout the mania. While there is plenty of marvellous music, particularly in the well-staged concert scenes, it does little to enliven the film. Ultimately, this superficial tribute reveals little new about Marley. JAMES MOTTRAM

This true-story drama, exploring the tragic legacy of an American wrestling dynasty, boasts strong performances and a heady atmosphere. Under the harsh tutelage of patriarch Jack (Holt McCallany), Kevin Von Erich (Zac Efron) and his brothers compete to become NWA World Champion, but tragedy strikes the family so often they begin to wonder if they're cursed. MATT GLASBY

ANIMATION Migration ★★★★ □ Available now

This charming animated adventure from Illumination the studio behind Despicable Me delivers a winning combination of sight gags, smart dialogue and wacky high jinks. It's the story of a family of overly cautious ducks (voiced by Elizabeth Banks, Kumail Nanjiani and Danny DeVito) who leave their New England pond to migrate to Jamaica. Along the way, they encounter a possibly predatory heron, a crazed chef with a fowl menu on his mind and a pigeon mafia. ALAN JONES

f you enjoy a gripping whodunnit or an immersive period drama, you'll love Shardlake. Based on the first novel in CJ Sansom's bestselling book series, this compelling four-part mystery is set in 16th-century England, against the backdrop of Henry VIII's infamous Reformation and the dissolution of the monasteries.

Arthur Hughes (Then Barbara Met Alan) is Matthew Shardlake, a lawyer whose sheltered life is turned upside down when he's sent on a secret sleuthing mission by Henry VIII's right-hand man Thomas Cromwell, played by the charismatic Sean Bean. After one of Cromwell's commissioners is murdered at a monastery in the remote town of Scarnsea, he instructs Shardlake to investigate - and ultimately claim the monastery's wealth for the king. Accompanied by the arrogant and ambitious Jack Barak, played by Anthony Boyle (Masters of the Air), Shardlake heads to Scarnsea, where he soon discovers that the death he's investigating is not the first. Facing hostility and suspicion from the monks, who will seemingly stop at nothing to preserve their order, Shardlake is drawn into a web of lies, deceit and corruption that threatens not only his integrity, but his life.

We've had a buoyant couple of Eurovision years. Sam Ryder reversed the UK's fortunes in 2022 with his stellar Space Man, and Liverpool's hosting of the ceremony last year was triumphant. After what felt like an eternity of nil points and leaderboard languishing, the contest once again became a joyful, instead of painful, watch.

The question now is whether Olly Alexander can keep that momentum going. The floor-filler Dizzy is a solid pop anthem, yet it's had a lukewarm response from the bookies. He may be the first established music act we have sent to the contest in over a decade, but Switzerland, Croatia and Italy are the favourites, while commentator supremo Graham Norton has also picked out the entries from France and Belgium as songs to listen out for. Also worth keeping an ear out for are how many times homegrown Swedes Abba are mentioned, because 2024 marks 50 years since their Waterloo win.

There will undoubtedly be plenty of jubilation in Malmo, but there are sombre layers to tonight's contest, too. Ukraine's song is about the courage, strength and resilience of the country's women, while Israel's inclusion in this year's competition has caused controversy and consternation.

At times, gauging the tone will be tricky, but you can rely on a few certainties: outlandish outfits, bizarre staging and awkward technical problems. It wouldn't be Eurovision without them.

Now that Nicolae Ceausescu's right-hand man Victor Godeanu (Alec Secareanu) has announced his desire to defect and is holed up in an American safe house, you'd think that would be that. However, the East Germans, Russians and Romanians are determined to find him, and President Carter is reluctant to sanction Victor's extraction in case it scuppers his peace talks.

As all sides continue to play their deadly cat-and-mouse games, US agent Frank Jackson (Parker Sawyers) has reason to distrust the shifty Victor. That's bad news for him, but it's his family back home who are suffering the most. Ceausescu ain't happy... JANE RACKHAM

Doctor Who

6.20pm, 7.05pm BBC1 Available on iPlayer from midnight on Fri 10 May Some Doctors need a while to find their feet, but not Ncuti Gatwa, who's bounding around here with such brio that you can almost feel both of those Time Lord hearts pumping at full pelt.

His and new companion Ruby Sunday's (Millie Gibson) first two destinations are a space station crewed by babies, followed by the London of 1963, where a diabolical god (Jinkx Monsoon) has nefarious plans for the Beatles. As for tone, the two episodes are pretty much contrasting, being by turns cutesy and bombastic. But threaded through both is a neat line of allegory, with writer Russell T Davies touching on such pertinent issues as childcare costs, the status of refugees and the importance of the arts. A double bill of the behind-the-scenes show Doctor Who: Unleashed follows over on BBC3 from 8pm. DAVID BROWN See features: pages 24 and 144

FILM REVIEWS

FILM OF THE DAY

Mr Holmes ★★★★ 8.00-9.40pm BBC2 (not in Wales)

MYSTERY This film takes a sympathetic look at the agonies of old age, as it finds a great mind failing. Sherlock Holmes (Ian McKellen) is now a frail 93-year-old living with his housekeeper (Laura Linney) and her young son (Milo Parker). Haunted by jumbled memories, Holmes pieces together the fragments of his final case. McKellen communicates Holmes's complex psychology through a range of scowls and sneers, while the lively Parker is a delightful companion. Mr Holmes resists the sensational reveals of traditional mysteries to deliver a more moving conclusion. EMMA SIMMONDS (UK/US/Aus 2015, HD)

The Karate Kid 8 ***

12.30-2.55pm C4

ADVENTURE This junior version of Rocky – both films were directed by John G Avildsen – became a massive worldwide success, spawning a series of seguels plus hit Netflix show Cobra Kai. Ralph Macchio plays the bullied teen who is taught the secrets of karate by wise old Pat Morita and sets about turning the tables on his tormentors. JOHN FERGUSON (US 1984, edited for violence, swearing, HD)

The Lavender Hill Mob ****

1.00-2.15pm BBC2

COMEDY In this Ealing classic, the inimitable Alec Guinness stars as the mild-mannered bank clerk who discovers he has a criminal mind. Deciding to steal a million in gold bullion, he enlists the help of Stanley Holloway, Alfie Bass and Sid James. TEB Clarke's impeccable screenplay rightly won an Oscar. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1951, BW, HD)

 Bill ★★★ 2.00-3.30pm BBC1 (not in Wales)

COMEDY The members of TV's Horrible Histories made a promising feature debut with this ribald period romp that follows "Bill" Shakespeare

(Mathew Baynton) as he heads to London to seek his fortune. Among the cast, Simon Farnaby stands out as the foppish Earl of Croydon, while Helen McCrory is a comically grotesque Queen Elizabeth. JAMIE HEALY (UK 2014, some violence, brief swearing, HD)

Indiana Jones and the Kingdom of the Crystal Skull ★★★★ 6.40-9.00pm Film4 12

ADVENTURE Harrison Ford's fourth outing as the intrepid archaeologist is set in 1957 and finds him on the trail of the fabled Crystal Skull of Akator, hotly pursued by Cate Blanchett's Soviet agent. The "nuking the fridge" sequence is ridiculous, but Ford is as charmingly world-weary as ever, and there's a pleasing emphasis on "old school" stuntwork. ANDREW COLLINS (US 2008 edited for content HD)

Casino Royale ★★★★ 8.00-10.40pm ITV1 12

SPY Daniel Craig effortlessly made the role of James Bond his own with this 21st movie in the series. It's an origins story for 007, as he tackles villain Le Chiffre (Mads Mikkelsen) in a high-stakes game of poker. Craig offers a flawed, humanised interpretation of the hero, while Eva Green provides an alluring love interest as Treasury agent Vesper Lynd. ADAM SMITH (UK/ CzRep/Ger/US 2006, violence, col/BW, HD) Ħ

■ Copshop ★★★

9.00-11.10pm C4

THRILLER Gerard Butler plays a silver-tongued hitman in this enjoyable action romp from director Joe Carnahan (The Grey). Frank Grillo co-stars as a criminal on the run who purposefully gets himself arrested to hide in the relative safety of police custody. A cat-and-mouse game then ensues when Butler also gets himself put behind bars. BETH WEBB (US 2021, violence, swearing, HD)

The Hangover $\star\star\star\star$

10.15pm-12.30am 5 Star 15

COMEDY This stag-do lark sees three friends (Bradley Cooper, Ed Helms and Zach Galifianakis) wake up after an excessive night in Las Vegas, with no sign of the groomto-be (Justin Bartha) and no memory of the previous evening's events. Their quest to put things right is cleverly plotted and packed with hilarious dialogue. KAREN KRIZANOVICH (US 2009, violence, swearing, nudity, HD)

3:10 to Yuma ★★★★ 11.10pm-1.25am C4

WESTERN James Mangold's remake of Delmer Daves's 1957 movie makes for an exciting and emotional ride. Christian Bale stars as a hard-up rancher who offers to escort a captured outlaw (Russell Crowe) to the prison train. A bond begins to grow between the two men, and the tension mounts as Crowe's gang slowly closes in. STELLA PAPAMICHAEL (US 2007, violence, swearing, HD)

Women's FA Cup Final Tottenham v Manchester United

1.50pm (kick-off 2.30pm) BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

Whatever happens in today's game, one thing is certain: a new name will be engraved on the Women's FA Cup trophy. Tottenham Hotspur make their first appearance in the final, while Manchester United have only managed one previous losing outing, pipped 1-0 by Chelsea last year. If the league game that the two played in April is anything to go by, this could be a corker. Then, first-half goals from Beth England and Jessica Naz saw Spurs leading 2-1 until Man Utd earned a last-gasp corner. With even reds goalkeeper Mary Earps up in the box, Spurs' defence was in chaos and Man Utd defender Maya Le Tissier bundled in an equaliser to make it 2-2 in the 92nd minute. CERI THOMAS

DRAMA Hudson & Rex

7.00pm, 8.00pm Alibi Catch up via Now

Series six finds Canadian cop Charlie Hudson (John Reardon) having had a drastic makeover. The hair is longer and curlier, his suits abandoned in favour of open-necked black shirts and too-tight jeans. He's strutting around like a Knight Rider-era David Hasselhoff, only with a crime-busting dog instead of a crime-busting car.

The changes aren't just cosmetic, with this opening double bill hardly mentioning Charlie's relationship with chief of forensics Sarah Truong (Mayko Nguyen). At least Rex can still be relied upon to pounce on prime suspects in slow motion, but these episodes generally feel much more deadpan than we've seen previously. Please, can we just have the old show back? DAVID BROWN

DRAMA The Responder

9.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer

Raddled response cop Chris (Martin Freeman) finally opens up to his support group. He's worn out and in despair over always making "the same mistakes over and over again, just when I think I'm moving in the right direction!" We feel for him. We know Chris flirts with criminality — all right, more than flirts — because he's desperate to keep his ex and their daughter close, to stop them moving to London. As his world falls apart, each sad scene has a cutting edge you could carve meat with.

But there's still room for humour and dashes of the bizarre as Chris helps a man (Kevin Eldon) in pyjamas with dementia, who simply wants to know where the sun has gone.

DRAMA Red Eve

9.00pm ITV1 Full series on ITVX

A jammed drinks elevator wouldn't cause concern on a regular plane journey. However, this is a jet-propelled Agatha Christie-style trip, albeit one that's travelling in economy as opposed to business.

Admittedly, failure to provide a drink is far down the list of crimes. The body count is rising as the time to Beijing counts down – and there's still seven hours and 25 minutes to go (of the flight, not the series).

Jess (Jemma Moore) isn't having luck back home, either. Her visit to pharma boss George Chapman (Peter Guinness) turns lethal. She should've guessed when he looked slowly left and right before he closed the front door. Oh, that gun behind his back was a bit of a clue, too. FT

As Alice Roberts learns in this diverting documentary, that may soon change. The Remains of the Dav: The Read with Steve Pemberton

9.00pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer When it comes to characters who are their own worst enemy, buttoned-up butler Stevens takes some beating. In this melancholy tale, he acts out of a misplaced sense of loyalty to his Nazi-sympathising master at an English stately home in the run-up to the Second World War. But in so doing, he denies himself a chance at real happiness with a housekeeper.

It's heart-piercingly affecting, and bringing Kazuo Ishiguro's Bookerwinning novel to life (in an abridged form) is Inside No 9's Steve Pemberton. His narration will hopefully result in you doing your own duty and seeking out the book in full. DB

The fact-based drama about the American opioid crisis continues, with centre stage taken this week by Bridget Mever (Rosario Dawson), the DEA agent trying to nail a rogue pharmaceutical company in the early 2000s. She faces a litany of iniquities, from everyday workplace sexism to the institutional corruption of government bodies. On the other hand, when her detractors say she is taking the OxyContin addiction scandal personally, they're right. In the earlier timeline, the victims of that addiction continue to spiral horrendously downwards: it's a bracing, unflinching document of a huge injustice. JACK SEALE

TRAVEL Rob and Rylan's Grand Tour

9.00pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

Unlikely pals Rob Rinder and Rylan are following in the footsteps of Lord Byron, embarking on a Grand Tour they hope will turn them into civilised gentlemen and complete their classical education (or start it, in Rylan's case).

They are in the "fairy city of the heart" - Venice - exploring its art, architecture, music and history as well as doing all the usual touristy things. It's slight but saucy fun, although both men also speak frankly about their recent divorces and how, much like Venetians did during carnival, they hide behind masks.

For 19th-century Italians that was a route to sexual freedom, but this pair choose to express that by parading the streets in drag. It's uncanny how much Rylan looks like Eurovision's Conchita Wurst. JR Your RT Travel: page 134

FILM OF THE DAY

Calamity Jane

4.00-5.35pm BBC2 (not in N Ireland)

MUSICAL COMEDY The opening sequence of this wonderful film is pure pleasure, as Doris Day's Calamity Jane rides the Deadwood stage across the screen and into our hearts. The film is Warner Bros's Technicolored riposte to MGM's Annie Get Your Gun – the studio even poached the same leading man, Howard Keel, who's excellent as Wild Bill Hickok. The real strength of the movie, though, is Day. Just marvel at her timing in Just Blew In from the Windy City, while her performance of Secret Love – recorded in just one take – won the Oscar for best song. TONY SLOMAN (US 1953, HD)

School for Scoundrels

★★★ 12.30-2.00pm BBC2
(starts 11.30am in Wales)

COMEDY Based on Stephen Potter's books, this hit-andmiss film passes muster thanks to stars lan Carmichael and Terry-Thomas. There are some amusing moments as Carmichael learns how to "confound a bounder" under the tutelage of Alastair Sim, but director Robert Hamer struggles to knit the various sketches into a whole. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1960, BW, HD)

Kung Fu Panda 3★★★

3.25-5.10pm ITV1

ADVENTURE The affable third chapter in the animated saga pits Po the panda (voiced by Jack Black) against a supernatural warrior who is collecting the chi energy of China's greatest martial artists. The mix of life lessons, action and humour is right on the money. Kung Fu Panda 4 is now available to rent as a home premiere.

ALAN JONES (Chi/US 2016, HD)

Minority Report ★★★★ 7.30-10.20pm ITV2 12

THRILLER In the year 2054, top "Pre-cop" Tom Cruise is forced to go on the run after he's identified as a future killer. Adroitly realised by director Steven Spielberg from a Philip K Dick story, this is what great sci-fi cinema is all about, with its sleek, mind-boggling visuals and literate, witty script. AJ (US 2002, edited for content, HD)

Modern Times 8.00-9.45pm Sky Arts

COMEDY Sky's Charlie Chaplin season continues with this silent classic. In one of his finest outings, Chaplin ridicules an increasingly mechanised and mechanical society, delivering an inspired assembly line of gags. As machines chew up our hero and spit him out, Charlie finds solace in the love of Paulette Goddard and a sunset stroll into a happy-ever-after.
TOM HUTCHINSON (US 1936, HD)

Non-Stop ★★★ 9.00-11.10pm 5 Star

ACTION Liam Neeson leads this solid thriller as an air marshal on a flight from New York to London who receives a text telling him passengers will die unless money is transferred to a secret bank account. Aided by passenger Julianne Moore, Neeson is drawn into a cat-and-mouse game over the Atlantic. It's an intriguing premise, but the script does lay on the hammy dialogue a little too thick. TERRY STAUNTON (US 2014, violence, swearing, HD)

The Mountain between Us ★★★

11.00pm-1.05am C4

ADVENTURE Two strangers battle to survive when their aircraft crashes in a remote American mountain range in this solid melodrama. Surgeon Idris Elba and photojournalist Kate Winslet face snowdrifts, animal attacks and injury as they search for help. While it's all very much by the genre book, director Hany Abu-Assad stages the moments of peril with flair. TES (US 2017, swearing, a sex scene, HD)

Gringo ★★★

11.50pm-1.35am BBC1 (starts 12.20am in Scotland; not in N Ireland, Wales)

COMEDY In this fun romp, businessman David Oyelowo falls foul of Mexican drugs cartels when he's sent south of the border to oversee the creation of a "weed pill". Sharlto Copley plays the unhinged troubleshooter assigned to rescue him, while more laughs are provided by Charlize Theron as a tough drugs-firm bigwig. TES (Aus/US 2018, violence, swearing, HD)

Clemency ★★★★ 12 midnight-1.45am BBC2 15

DRAMA This gut-wrenching film provided Alfre Woodard with a role that earned her a Bafta nomination. She plays Bernadine, a staid warden overseeing death-row executions in a maximum-security prison. When she befriends Anthony (Aldis Hodge), an inmate awaiting a pardon that may never come, her stoic exterior starts to crumble. BETH WEBB (US 2019, swearing, disturbing scenes, HD)

DOCUMENTARY The Jennings vs Alzheimer's of the story, Carol Jennings.

her cheerful voice from 1993

it took three decades, that gene mutation.

6.30pm BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer Sometimes you've got to put your money where your mouth is, so Marcus Wareing agrees to take over a live cook-off slot at a popular Provençal farmers' market.

As the French don't rate British food, it's a challenge even for a chef who has run Michelin-starred restaurants. "I know exactly how MasterChef contestants feel now," he half-jokes.

Sourcing local ingredients is key and in the foothills of Mont Ventoux he nabs some acorn-fed pork steaks to flambé before drizzling them with salsa and serving with a fig and basil salad. Will it be délicieux or un désastre? More tomorrow.

JANE RACKHAM

Coronation Street

8.00pm ITV1 Catch up via ITVX Bernie Winter has led a colourful life, as any customer of Roy's Rolls who's endured her anecdotes while waiting for a bacon barm can attest. But among the tales of flogging crystals in the queue for the portaloos at Glastonbury, or lending her maracas to Bez from the Happy Mondays (I'm paraphrasing), there is untapped tragedy in her past: it seems Bernie had another child after twins Gemma and Paul, but had him adopted. Now she wants to find her long-lost son.

Following Toyah's heartbreaking recollection of her stillbirth, Corrie launches another story about secret kids born off screen and the trauma that's haunted the mother. Are the parallels deliberate, or could the similarities undermine both plots?

JOHNATHON HUGHES

Jamie Cooks Spring

8.00pm C4

Catch up via C4 streaming "My kids think I'm weird," says Jamie Oliver with a grin, "when they come in the kitchen and things are steaming and marinating and I'm screaming with excitement!" He's equally excited in his "garden shack", where he demonstrates how to make a celebratory salmon and Jersey potatoes dish, a broad beans mezze, rhubarb tart and - with the help of wife Jools - pesto-smeared spatchcock chicken served with a roquefort salad.

There are even a few moments when the old Naked Chef-style Jamie slips through. "Let's go from banging to muddling!" he shouts enthusiastically as he pounds away with a pestle and mortar. Everything he makes looks so good, though. JR

No one in a TV drama should ever sav the line, "What's the worst that could happen?" Because as soon as that question escapes a character's lips, something awful occurs. Someone as battle-scarred as Sandra really ought to know better, yet those are the words she casually uses after Stevie and Grace are sent on a seemingly routine response call. Needless to say, there are unforeseen consequences.

Someone else who's been recently blindsided is Tommy, last seen being set upon in a nightclub and abandoned by Murray Canning. Now I'm not usually one to advocate violence as a way of solving problems, but there is something cathartic about the sight of Annie decking Murray for being a self-interested weasel. DAVID BROWN

After a successful telly debut last year, Ken Bruce's irresistible music quiz returns with two convivial celeb editions – a natural progression, and it's fun to find out the competitors' pop connections. For instance, actor Richard Blackwood's uncle is Junior Giscombe of Mama Used to Say fame!

Quizmaster Ken has said they're not giving the celebs an easy ride; indeed, there are some real toughies tonight. In rounds such as "Mixtape" and "It's only words", five are whittled down to two to take part in the familiar format of the original PopMaster. There's lots of ribbing and selfmockery. Tomorrow, Claire from Steps and Nish Kumar are among the plucky panellists. MARK BRAXTON

Me and the Voice in My Head

Those diagnosed with Borderline Personality Disorder often experience intense feelings of emptiness and abandonment, but in recent years former Hollyoaks star Joe Tracini has been helping those with the condition feel less isolated thanks to videos that have become a viral hit. Now, in a candid film, he talks of his attempts to kill himself and addiction issues, before revealing all about the voice inside his own head that he's named Mick, after Jagger (because he feels screamed at the whole time by oversized lips).

Tracini's hope is that he can now get a handle on his BPD ahead of a stand-up show that could reignite his career. But there are fears that Mick may make his presence felt. DB

The Sky at Night

10pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer
They say less is more, and that certainly seems to be true of total solar eclipses, where the absence of the sun sheds light on certain details we can't normally see. Last month's eclipse was widely observed by the North American public, and this edition of the astronomy show takes a peek at the sort of things scientists can find cloaked in the starlight.

A lot of key eclipse data also comes from hobbyists, and Pete Lawrence travels to Bristol to meet some amateur corona connoisseurs, who helped to discover a pair of colliding exoplanets. He also provides a guide to what can be seen in daylight this coming month. Perhaps a temporary rebrand to The Sky at Lunchtime is required. GARY ROSE

NEW SERIES This isn't the first, and almost certainly won't be the last: a reality competition cut from the commissioners' cloth of "Give me The Traitors – but with a twist".

So here's a game of skulduggery set in the sun. Stephen Mangan purrs in pressed linen as ten pairs check in to the Fortune Hotel. Once there, each couple receives a briefcase. Eight are empty, one contains £250,000 and inside the last one is the dreaded early check-out card. No one knows what's in the others' luggage and throughout the game they swap cases, bluffing and blindsiding to avoid elimination and hope eventually to walk away with the case full of cash.

There are daily challenges, eerie overblown music and sneaky twists that flip everything on its head. It's flashy, slick and Mangan is enjoying himself (a jolly in the Caribbean – can you blame him?). But after one night, I'll take that early check-out card, please. Continues nightly till Thursday. THE

Cowboys & Aliens ****
6.30-9.00pm Film4

scI-FI Cowboy Daniel Craig must join forces with cattle baron Harrison Ford to take a stand against a fistful of giant mole monsters from outer space in this surprisingly successful hybrid of The Searchers and Independence Day. Iron Man director Jon Favreau's solid adaptation of a popular graphic novel is a rousing winner, remaining true to both the western and sci-fi genres, and gains enormous appeal from being played completely straight. It boasts plenty of genuine surprises and scary jolts, while the teaming of Craig and Ford works like a charm. ALAN JONES (US 2011, edited for content, HD)

Penny Serenade ★★★★ 8.45-11.00am

Talking Pictures TV

MELODRAMA In this heartbreaking romantic film, Irene Dunne looks back over the highs and lows of her marriage to Cary Grant as they prepare to part. It's all expertly controlled by director George Stevens, although some may find the theme of child mortality too distressing. Grant is brilliant, giving a subtly shaded portrayal that keeps sentimentality at bay.

The 300 Spartans ★★★ 11.00am-1.15pm Film4

ADVENTURE At a time when the sword-and-sandal epic was flourishing in Italy, 20th Century-Fox went to Greece to shoot this lively movie about the defence of Thermopylae in 480 BC. Director Rudolph Maté stages the battle sequences well, but the wooden dialogue leaves star Richard Egan looking like an animated statue. DAVID PARKINSON (US 1962. some violence. HD)

Night Passage ★★ 12 noon-1.55pm 5 Action □

WESTERN James Stewart stars here as a former railroad man who is pitted against his own train-robbing brother, Audie Murphy, when he's hired to deliver a payroll. Though beautifully shot, it rather dawdles along, indulging Stewart's singing and accordion-playing skills before climaxing with a decently staged shoot-out.

ADRIAN TURNER (US 1957)

The Boys ★★ 4.00-6.30pm Talking Pictures TV

DRAMA This 1960s British courtroom drama proves that some things never change, as Jess Conrad, Dudley Sutton and their pals find themselves suspected of murder simply because they're young and rebellious. With Richard Todd as the canny lawyer championing the lads' cause, the cast is a strong one, but Sidney J Furie's movie does feel rather dated. DP (UK 1961.BW)

The Dark Tower ★★ 9.00-10.55pm Great Movies 12

FANTASY A pick-and-mix bag of ideas culled from Stephen King's book series, this stars Tom Taylor as a youngster plagued by visions of another world inhabited by a dastardly sorcerer (Matthew McConaughey) and a disaffected gunslinger (Idris Elba). Favouring spectacle and exposition over characterisation, the film hastens to its depressingly open-ended dénouement.

The Way of the Dragon ★★★

9.00-11.00pm Sky Max

MARTIAL ARTS This was the only movie Bruce Lee had complete control over, being director, writer and fight choreographer. Lee plays a country bumpkin who arrives in Rome to help out at a Chinese restaurant menaced by hoods. The action compensates for the thin plot, and Lee's face-off with Chuck Norris inside the Colosseum is the undoubted highlight. ROBERT SELLERS (HK 1973, violence, swearing, HD)

Wish You Were Here ★★★★ 11.10pm-1.00am Talking Pictures TV

COMEDY Emily Lloyd made a startling debut here as a sexually defiant teenager raising hell in a 1950s seaside town. Writer/director David Leland takes as his inspiration the early life of "luncheon voucher madam" Cynthia Payne, and alongside the dazzling Lloyd there's strong support from Tom Bell in a decidedly unsympathetic role as a lecherous family friend. SUE ROBINSON (UK 1987, swearing, sex scenes, nudity)

Sweat ★★★★ 1.10-3.00am C4

DRAMA This persuasive Polish drama hovers between satire and social document as it depicts three days in the life of a fitness influencer. Magdalena Kolesnik convinces as Sylwia, who seems to have a life as perfectly sculpted as her physique, until a tearstrewn post about her lonely existence goes viral. JAMES MOTTRAM (Pol/Swe 2020, violence, swearing, sexual references, HD)

FOOD

MasterChef

8.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer It's tough enough cooking for a trio of MasterChef alumni or food critics, but tonight the eight semi-finalists must lay on a banquet for 70 people who have played a part in two decades of the show. It's a perfect opportunity for viewers to play Name That Finalist/Winner as the assembled guests tuck into a three-course feast at London's Fishmongers' Hall. Poor John Torode draws the short straw and must oversee the kitchen. Let's hope Gregg Wallace saves him a few tasty morsels.

Following this, the losing team faces a cruel test: cooking a dish featuring an ingredient that they hate. Even worse, it will be judged by people who also hate it. The semi-finals continue on Thursday and Friday. JANE RACKHAM

DOCUMENTARY

The Yorkshire Vet

8.00pm Channel 5 Catch up via My5

Being a vet isn't just about saving cuddly animals for grateful owners. and tonight's programme is certainly not for the squeamish. Take, for instance, the newborn lamb who's rushed to surgery with its intestines outside its body. "To be honest," warns vet Rohin Aojula, "the chances of coming back from this are pretty slim." And then there's Chester, a golden retriever who has a giant tumour on his anal gland, and Hugo, an understandably stroppy pig whose painful ear infection is stinking out his sty. There is an awful lot of blood.

There is uplift, though, when would-be vet, ten-year-old leukaemia sufferer Lucian, is given a day to remember by the series stalwarts.

Changing Ends

8.30pm ITV1 Full series on ITVX Ferris Bueller spent his day off driving around in a Ferrari and performing Twist and Shout at a huge Chicago parade. The young Alan Carr (Oliver Savell), on the other hand, skips classes to watch the cast of Hi-de-Hi! on Pebble Mill at One.

The reason why he's stretched out on the couch faking concussion is because he wants to avoid the BCG injections at school (as he reckons he'll end up in a coma after the jab). But what the timid truant hasn't factored in is the prospect of being nursed by his dad Graham (Shaun Dooley), who rather than fetching his son an Agatha Christie paperback to read, decides to break out the A Question of Sport board game - a fate worse than inoculations. The Equalizer

9.00pm Sky Witness Catch up via Now

Queen Latifah is back, over-acting furiously in the lead role of former off-books government agent and all-round fixer Robyn in the fourth season of the reboot of the 1980s Edward Woodward favourite.

Picking up from the season three cliffhanger, Robyn and her sidekicks are wrangling with a disgruntled former CIA operative who wants revenge for the agency abandoning her during a dodgy mission to Venezuela. As it becomes clear that the target of the coming attacks is a senior politician with an annoying disregard for his own safety, Robyn and the gang have to resort to digital sleuthing, a lot of frowning and, at the episode's delirious high point, a fight using miniature swords. Christopher Eccleston

9pm Sky History Catch up via Now

A vivid two-parter about miscarriages of justice opens with an infamous case. "George Davis is innocent OK" was the slogan daubed on walls around London in the mid-1970s as part of a campaign to free East End cab driver Davis, who had been wrongfully imprisoned for an armed robbery.

The campaign was led by Davis's formidable wife Rosie and friend Peter Chappell, whose bizarre stunts included ram-raiding newspaper HQs, fusing the Christmas lights in Trafalgar Square and pouring oil on the Headingley cricket pitch. It was a saga that presenter Christopher Eccleston claims "kickstarted a seismic shift in British society". DBu

The Guilty Innocent with Praying for Armageddon

10.00pm BBC4 Catch up via iPlayer Tonje Hessen Schei's timely Storyville documentary examines the rise of America's evangelical right from several angles: the "knights on bikes" riding around the States to proselvtise and convert; the fire-and-brimstone pastors edging from fringes to mainstream; and those funding Israeli nationalism.

By the end of these encounters, it would be reasonable to assume their shared dismay that the recent threat of nuclear conflagration in the Middle East – and with it, the coming of the End Times they crave – seems to have abated a touch. Trump's election could well herald US foreign policy becoming a tool of biblical prophecy – a prospect to terrify all. GABRIEL TATE

10.40pm, 11.40pm (11.10pm, 12.10am Scotland; 11.40pm, 12.40am Wales & N Ire) BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer The second series of this neon-slick Japanese crime drama opens by tying up loose ends, such as whether gangster Sato (Sho Kasamatsu) survived his brutal stabbing and what gaijin news reporter Jake Edelstein (Ansel Elgort) does with evidence that a government minister watched a nightclub hostess being murdered.

But the Chihara-Kai and Tozawa gangs have a long reach and Jake and pragmatic detective Hiroto Katagiri (Ken Watanabe) are quickly sidelined. It's absorbing. particularly the depiction of etiquette between these feuding gangs: a submissive bow before a finger is brutally cut off. JR

The Gathering

9.00pm C4 Catch up: C4 streaming

A sense of foreboding hangs over the first hour of this Merseyside-set thriller, as we're aware from the off that an awful fate is set to befall gymnast Kelly (Eva Morgan), who's seen in the opening seconds being held under water at an illegal rave on a tidal islet.

At the time of the assault, her screams go unheard, but viewers will find them echoing across the rest of the episode, which spools back a month to reveal who may have wished her ill. There's teammate Jessica (Sadie Soverall), who has wealth but not the talent her friend possesses, as well as Jess's mother Natalie (Vinette Robinson), for whom ambition knows no bounds. And then we have Kelly's dad Paul (Warren Brown), who has an issue with impulse control. Any of them could be tied to the attack, but which of them did it? More tomorrow at 9pm. DB

Gifted ★★★★ 6.55-9.00pm Film4

DRAMA Adopting a change of pace from his DAY Captain America heroics, Chris Evans plays a boat repairman who is giving his maths-genius niece (Mckenna Grace) a normal upbringing at a local school. But their lives are complicated when he becomes embroiled in a custody battle with the girl's estranged grandmother (Lindsay Duncan), who believes the girl should attend a specialised school in order to reach her full potential. A certain predictability aside, Gifted has some lovely scenes and makes for affecting viewing, with Evans an engaging presence throughout. STEPHEN CARTY (US/UK 2017, edited for content, HD)

ROMANCE This serviceable flyboy saga stars John Payne as the veteran pilot who risks his neck to help develop an ejector device for a new B-47 bomber. Karen Steele plays his wife, who doesn't want her children to lose their father. Editor-turned-director Francis D Lyon steers a steady course, focusing as much on the realities of service life as on aerial derring-do. DAVID PARKINSON (US 1957, BW)

The Swimmer ★★★★ 1.10-3.00pm Film4

DRAMA In Frank Perry's suburban odyssey, Burt Lancaster stars as a washedup man who decides to swim home via every pool in his neighbourhood. Based on a story by cult writer John Cheever, the film is an object lesson in late-1960s alienation. Its trippier moments won't be to everyone's taste, but it does provide a beguiling snapshot of the times. ADRIAN TURNER (US 1968, HD)

Wild Horses ★★★

3.00-4.50pm Legend

WESTERN DRAMA Country singer Kenny Rogers stars in this modern-day cowboy movie. He plays an ex-rodeo star who finds his new blue-collar life boring, and turns his back on it to take part in a wild-horse round-up. Rogers has an easy charm, and his legions of fans will lap up the songs featured on the soundtrack. DAVE ALDRIDGE (US/NZ TVM 1985)

The Colditz Story ★★★★ 4.55-6.55pm Film4

WAR Set in the German fortress of the title, this is one of the best of all PoW dramas. The story about the escapes undertaken by Allied prisoners has little time for the psychology of imprisonment, but the action is well-played - tense at times, music-hall jolly at others. John Mills shines as Pat Reid, on whose first-hand account the film is based, AT (UK 1954, BW, HD)

The Trust ★★★ 9.00-15 10.55pm Great Movies

THRILLER In this modestly scaled crime flick. Nicolas Cage and Elijah Wood play Las Vegas cops who spot their chance for a life-changing score when they happen upon a drug gang's secret vault. There's not quite enough narrative substance to go round, but the guirkily disarming visuals and engaging turns from the stars make it worth a look, TREVOR JOHNSTON (UK 2016, violence, swearing, sex scenes, drug abuse)

SCI-FI This apocalyptic chiller stars Will Smith as a military scientist who is immune to a virus that has turned most of humanity into vampire-like zombies. Smith succeeds in conveying the paranoid loneliness of a man who could be the last human on Earth, while the sight of Manhattan transformed into an overgrown wilderness exerts an eerie charge. ALAN JONES (US 2007, violence)

The Stepfather ★★★★ 11.00pm-12.45am

Talking Pictures TV

HORROR In this sardonic and unerringly frightening B-movie, widow Shelley Hack and daughter Jill Schoelen gradually come to realise that the charming, affable new man of the house (Terry O'Quinn) is actually a serial killer, Joseph Ruben's faultless direction sets the unfolding mayhem against an unsettling backdrop of mundane normality. AJ (US 1986, violence, swearing, nudity)

What Ever Happened to Baby Jane? 12

11.15pm-1.25am BBC2

DRAMA This unhinged and much-imitated chiller finds Bette Davis's grotesquely made-up former child star making life a misery for her paralysed sister, Joan Crawford. The on-screen fireworks between the two leads were reportedly fuelled by their real-life rivalry, as depicted in the TV series Feud: Bette and Joan. AJ (US 1962, violence, BW, HD)

The Repair Shop

8.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer
At first glance, the battered old notebook belonging to Claire's late grandmother merely contains handwritten recipes. That's nice enough, but, remarkably, hidden among the recipes for lemon cake and ginger parkin are radio equipment diagrams and notes about code-breaking secrets that helped the Enigma team at Bletchley Park.
For bookbinder Chris Shaw, there are "hold your breath kind of moments"
as he gently restores the fragile item.

Meanwhile, Dominic Chinea attempts to make a 1760 fire engine pump work again. Charmingly, and this is so typical of all the experts' respectful attitude, he immediately thanks Geoffrey, who wants to use it as a fund-raiser for his village, "for trusting me with it". JANE RACKHAM found community support vital. For the final programme of this heart-warming series, she returns to her roots to see whether the area – always one of stark contrasts – still has a strong community spirit. It does: a Sicilian café generously feeds locals for nothing once every month and a centre provides vital help to women in need.

As an impoverished single mother some years ago in Notting Hill, west London, Andi Oliver

It's an emotional visit for Oliver and her daughter Miquita as they put on a banging celebration for the community, fuelled by kindness and delicious food, in the shadow of Trellick Tower. JR

Race across the World

9.00pm BBC1 Catch up via iPlayer What's the worst thing that could happen to you when you're travelling? Leaving your passport on a bus would be a contender and this disaster befalls one of the teams as they race their way from Thailand through the Malay peninsula to Bukittinggi on the Indonesian island of Sumatra.

The pairs employ different strategies on this leg: one couple decide to earn money by finding work along the way, while another duo take the speediest route and don't stop until they reach the checkpoint. However, they all discover that Sumatran bus timetables aren't an exact science and, although they've learnt to go with the flow, the lost passports do cause a spot of tension. JR

Jess's mum Natalie appears to have mistaken control for support. Over the course of episode two, we see her imposing an agenda on her daughter, one that piles on the pressure when it comes to Jess's currently lacklustre performance in the elite gymnastics squad. But this strict governing of Jess's life also results in deepening ill-feeling between her and fellow athlete Kelly, who, as we already know, will end up being attacked.

The big question is whether Natalie's efforts to impose discipline will result in Jess committing a wild act of violence? With more to come next week, I suspect fresh layers and motives have yet to be added to this already murky tale of teen rivalries.

Painting Birds with Jim and Nancy Moir

9.00pm Sky Arts Catch up via Now This week's guest takes the Moirs to Derbyshire on the trail of the dipper. A sunny day presents them with sparkling waters in the woods of the Peak District. They spy a water vole, song thrush and grey wagtail - with expert help on where to look, it's not long before the dipper darts into view, too. "Males will puff out their chest, like a rock star," says Jim, who is keen to depict some of its unique behaviour in a woodcut.

His guest, actor Nitin Ganatra, is also trying something new, as they line up a landscape near Chatsworth House. It's a pleasure to be immersed in the creative process, amid verdant vistas. Afterwards you'll want to experience both. MARK BRAXTON

The Red King

9.00pm Alibi Catch up via Now Until now, The Red King has focused on the island's unsettling numinous rituals, those steadfast beliefs that strike incomer Grace (Anjli Mohindra) as being innately sinister. Midway through, to retain our attention. writer Toby Whithouse now splatters the screen with a grisly scene of horror you won't forget in a hurry, especially if you ordinarily head to Alibi for repeats of Father Brown.

Back at the police station, meanwhile, Grace gives a job to the ever-enthusiastic Winter (Maeve Courtier-Lilley), though this does seem an unlikely development. The King

10.10pm, 11.10pm Sky Atlantic Catch up via Now

The man we know and love as Inspector Montalbano, Luca Zingaretti, is somewhat less approachable in this lurid prison drama, in which he plays Bruno Testori. Season one saw governor Testori investigate the murder of a colleague in his inimitable way, starting with killing the chief suspect. Now he's no longer running the iail because he's an inmate, forced by the secret services to collect information on a magistrate who is thought to have committed murder.

Much scheming, shanking and kicking people half to death ensues, with Zingaretti's piercing gaze and the gothic location lending it all a nicely foreboding air. JACK SEALE

Steve Pemberton and Reece Shearsmith never fail to deliver, and if you're in the mood for something dark, delicious and intense, this will be just the brew for you.

Obliquely titled The Trolley Problem, the latest edition is a two-hander, which shows for the umpteenth time not just what clever and devious writers they are, but also their skill at creating distinctive new characters for each half-hour.

One stormy night, psychotherapist Blake (Pemberton) rescues a saturated waif, Drew (Shearsmith), from the edge of a bridge, where he was contemplating ending his life. Blake invites the stranger into his remote cottage and offers him tea and some advice about mindfulness classes, cognitive detox and laughter yoga. But could his professional glibness prove his undoing?

FILM REVIEWS

DAY

• Fly Away Home ★★★★ 6.40-9.00pm Great Movies

DRAMA Few directors capture the beauty of nature better than Carroll Ballard, who also made Never Cry Wolf and Black Stallion. This movie gets off to a painful start with a fatal road accident, but the mood changes as young Anna Paguin channels her grief into the rearing of some orphan goslings. A plan is then hatched to fly a microlight plane to guide Paguin's feathered family to its winter breeding ground. With selfless support from Jeff Daniels as Paquin's inventor father - and from the geese themselves this is an unbounded delight. DAVID PARKINSON (US 1996)

Sands of Iwo Jima ★★★ 12.55-3.05pm Film4

WAR John Wayne leads his marines to hell and back in director Allan Dwan's gung-ho movie. Apparently, Kirk Douglas was up for the role, but, according to the film's producer, Wayne wanted the role so badly "he could taste it". The result, though made on the cheap and often risible, is still eminently watchable - and the Duke nabbed an Oscar nomination for his efforts. ADRIAN TURNER (US 1949, BW, HD)

Sahara ★★★

3.00-5.00pm Legend

ACTION Humphrey Bogart spent most of the war years playing selfish loners, but this film is an exception. He stars as an army sergeant leading a bunch of no-hopers across the desert in a tank, dodging Nazis as they search for a waterhole. Directed by Zoltan Korda, this boasts top talent behind the camera and a lot of derring-do in

The Blue Lamp $\star\star\star\star$

CRIME Scripted by TEB Clarke (Passport to Pimlico) and shot in a documentary style, this film stars Jimmy Hanley as the rookie police officer who goes after the

London gang who shot veteran copper Jack Warner. Hanley is a touch lightweight, but a pre-stardom Dirk Bogarde is outstanding as a petty crook. DP (UK 1949, BW, HD)

Bill & Ted's Bogus Sourney ★★★★

7.10-9.00pm Film4

COMEDY This sequel lacks the inspired stupidity of Bill & Ted's Excellent Adventure. but it's still a hoot. Airheads Bill and Ted (Alex Winter and Keanu Reeves) are trying to get their band together when they are murdered by their robotic doppelgangers. They must then defeat the Grim Reaper if they are to fulfil their destinies as saviours of mankind. JOHN FERGUSON (US 1991, edited for content, HD)

The A-Team ★★ 8.00-10.25pm ITV4

the popular 1980s TV series. Col John "Hannibal" Smith (Liam Neeson) and his crack squad of covert operatives are wrongfully jailed during a mission to steal back printing plates capable of flooding the world with millions of counterfeit US dollars. The movie doffs its cap to the original, but is too brash and loud to really warm to.

TERRY STAUNTON (US/UK 2010, edited for content, HD) Deadpool 2 ★★★★ 9.00-11.20pm Film4

ACTION Ryan Reynolds cracks wise once more as the mutant for hire in a sequel that's both funnier and more ambitious than the original The story sees Deadpool taken on as an X-Men trainee and befriend a teenage tearaway (Julian Dennison) while battling a Terminatorlike time traveller (Josh Brolin). Sequel Deadpool & Wolverine is in cinemas in July. EMMA SIMMONDS (US 2018, violence, swearing, sex references, HD)

HORROR A woman uses witchcraft to further her husband's career in this nifty adaptation of Fritz Leiber Jr's classic tale. Although the film is overly melodramatic at times, director Sidney Hayers creates plenty of spine-tingling moments. Even though you can clearly see the wires, you'll still be unnerved by the sight of the stone eagle as it comes to life in the eerie coda. ALAN JONES (UK 1961, BW)

The Butterfly Effect ★★★ 10.55pm-1.05am Legend 15

THRILLER Ashton Kutcher stars in this ambitious supernatural thriller, playing a troubled college student who discovers he has the ability to go back in time and rewrite the past. Touching on provocative themes such as child abuse, disability and terminal illness, this makes for powerful and disturbing viewing. SLOAN FREER (US/Can 2003, violence, swearing)

Coca-Cola's Dirty Secret

8pm C4 Catch up via C4 streaming As a nation, we have a terrible Coke habit. I am, of course, referring to the carbonated drink – we get through two billion units every year. That equates, on average, to each person in the UK consuming around 30 bottles and cans of the stuff.

That statistic is shocking enough and worthy of its own Dispatches. However, this one-off instead looks at the global environmental impact of such fervent fizzy drink consumption. Reporter Ellie Flynn digs into the company's bold claims regarding recycling and water sustainability to see how they stack up against the reality of Coca-Cola being not only the biggest producer of soft drinks in the world but also, potentially, one of its biggest polluters. FRANCES TAYLOR

Taskmaster

9.00pm C4

Catch up via C4 streaming

At this stage, the Taskmaster house has been re-created in virtual reality, obsessively catalogued by die-hard fans and has even popped up on other shows like Celebrity Hunted – but this week's episode gives us more of a behind-the-scenes look than we've had in years, taking the camera into the unseen dressing room used by celebrities between takes.

This is so Alex Horne can deliver a secret task to be carried out clandestinely during the next team activity, with each contestant given a slightly different objective. It makes for great, chaotic fun on screen – it's just a shame the longtime fans will be too busy adding a new area to their official Taskmaster map to pay much attention. HUW FULLERTON

The Hotel Inspector

9pm Channel 5 Catch up via My5 Daniel and Janette run a small fringe theatre in Brighton's vibrant Kemptown area, but it's not the box office side of their business that needs Alex Polizzi's help. In 2019 they expanded into the next-door property to create a café/bar that would financially support their theatrical endeavours. Post-Covid they decided they couldn't afford to staff the café (the pair are reticent about running it themselves), so it's been closed ever since. "Sitting around waiting for customers isn't ever going to solve their financial problems," fumes Alex, before transforming the drab exterior and unloved interior and encouraging them to advertise their existence. Once again, she gets a standing ovation for her performance. JR

Richard Hammond's Workshop

9pm Quest

All three series are on Discovery+ You can see what they are aiming for with Richard Hammond's Workshop, but it pales a little next to Clarkson's Farm: Hammond is just too affable, less spiky and unpredictable than his Grand Tour co-host, and never feels far enough out of his comfort zone as he builds the profile of his classic car restoration workshop. Still, this third series opens with just the right amount of peril, with a 1947 Delahaye sports car once owned by Grand Prix driver Louis Chiron - a project that would establish them as serious players - having to go on display at the RAC in just over a week. It needs a paint job and the computerised match of "Nissan Micra Blue" is unlikely to cut it. GABRIEL TATE

The Tattooist of Auschwitz

9.00pm Sky Atlantic Full series on Now

There have been criticisms that Lali Sokolov's recollections of Auschwitz-Birkenau weren't historically accurate. And there's a sequence tonight, where he gets medicine for Gita, that does make you question the veracity of some details. But then, most of us misremember things, and Lali said that this was a story of love, endurance and survival, not a factual account of the Holocaust, Even so. the unspeakable daily horrors are graphically depicted, in dramatic contrast to the sunshine-bright scenes of Lali speaking in later life. But it's the lingering shots of gaunt, filthy inmates staring into the camera that make this so haunting. JR

Murdoch Mysteries

9.00pm Alibi Catch up via Now
That syrupy voice and talk of national security can mean only one thing:
Terrence Meyers is back. With cigar in one hand and a whiskey in the other, the intrepid secret agent is, this time, involving himself in the campaign of prime ministerial candidate Robert Borden, a recently fired employee of whom has been found murdered.

Many of those within the politician's orbit are, according to Inspector Brackenreid anyway, as slippery as tinned fish. But none can really claim to be as Iubricious as Meyers, the only man in Toronto capable of outsmarting Murdoch. But, on this occasion, is the spy himself being spied upon? And when it comes to the election, could there be a fatal result? DAVID BROWN

Johnson and Knopfler's Music Legends

10pm Sky Arts Catch up via Now In Miami, the Geordie musical giants are almost as excited about cruising around Little Havana in a Pontiac GTO as they are about meeting their guest, Chic linchpin and production maven Nile Rodgers. If the anecdotes are familiar, they've aged well and Rodgers's journey from scrappy son of heroin addicts to disco genius, hip-hop icon and creative foil for Bowie, Madonna, Diana Ross and Daft Punk bears repeating. The rendition of Only You and a "Johnny Cash version" of Good Times won't win any Grammys, but it's a lovely moment for three men who left selfconsciousness behind long ago to enjoy playing, singing and hanging out just for the fun of it. FILM REVIEWS

P Blue Bayou ★★★ 9.00-11.20pm Film4 15

DRAMA Inspired by shocking true stories of deportation and families being ripped apart, this impassioned drama certainly has its heart in the right place. Writer/director Justin Chon also stars as Antonio, a tattoo artist adopted from Korea by a Louisiana couple years earlier, while Alicia Vikander plays his physical-therapist wife. Despite having lived in the US for decades, Antonio finds himself utterly exposed after an altercation with police, and so begins a fight in the courts. This is a rough-edged tale with a strong sense of place, although the drama can feel a little over-thetop at times. JAMES MOTTRAM (US/Can 2021, violence, swearing, HD)

12 noon-3.00pm

Talking Pictures TV

DRAMA This is the film that won Burt Lancaster the only Oscar of his career. He plays a conman who poses as a preacher to join the touring Bible company of Jean Simmons's evangelist. The film also nabbed Oscars for Richard Brooks's script and Shirley Jones's turn as a vengeful prostitute. TONY SLOMAN (US 1960, violence)

Above Us the Waves $\star\star$ 12.55-2.50pm Legend

WAR Having failed with torpedoes, John Mills and his rookie crew set out in midget submarines to try to sink the German battleship Tirpitz in this disappointing Second World War tale. Riddled with stiff-upperlipped stereotypes, this is one of those proud re-creations of an "against the odds" mission that were the staple of postwar British cinema. DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1955, BW)

Bullet to Beiiina ★★ 5.05-7.10pm Great Action 15

THRILLER Thirty years after he made his debut as Harry Palmer in The Ipcress File, Michael Caine resurrected the British spy for two TV films. of which this is the first. A retired Palmer is now in Russia, working with ex-KGB agents to stop North Korea using biological weapons. Michael Gambon pops up along the way as a Russian magnate. ADRIAN TURNER (UK/Can/Rus 1995, edited for content)

ADVENTURE The action is impressive and the locations are suitably exotic in this far-fetched but fun movie. Matthew McConaughey is the salvage expert who learns that a gold-laden American Civil War battleship may have ended up in the African desert. Along for the ride are sidekick Steve Zahn and Penélope Cruz as a WHO doctor, BRIAN PENDREIGH (US/Sp/Ger 2005, edited for content, HD)

THRILLER Lisbeth Salander, the girl with the dragon tattoo, returns in the guise of The Crown's Claire Foy in this action-packed but forgettable film. Lisbeth is hired by a scientist (Stephen Merchant) to erase software for the US government that identifies global nuclear arsenals. But when the data is stolen, a web of deceit emerges. WESTERN The overlong title betrays the serious mood of this powerful epic. Brad Pitt is fantastic as Jesse James, the outlaw shot by a member of his own gang (Casey Affleck), a whining wannabe who was once his greatest fan. Film-maker Andrew Dominik turns their story into a tragedy about the perils of fame. JAMIE RUSSELL (US/Can 2007, violence, sexual references, HD)

TRAVEL Grand Tour of Scotland's Rivers

7.00pm (not on Wales) BBC2 Full series via iPlayer now

As historian Paul Murton tells us, the River Forth means "the slow-running one" in an ancient Celtic language. Suitably enough, Murton glides along it at a relaxed pace, from Ben Lomond, Scotland's most southerly Munro, to the spectacular Kelpies, two 30-metre-high horse sculptures. Bristling with facts and enthusiasm, Murton takes part in a re-enactment of the Battle of Bannockburn, researches Rob Roy and stands atop a viewing tower on Flanders Moss, a magnificent lowland peat bog. More an Intimate Look rather than a Grand Tour, this continues to be a gently paced love letter to Scottish traditions and landscape as much as its river network. JOHN AIZLEWOOD

DOCUMENTARY Unreported World

7.30pm C4 Catch up: C4 streaming It's estimated that half of the timber harvested from the virgin forests of Romania is being done illegally. Despite legal action by the EU, the country's government still authorises logging in wildlife-rich protected areas, while the "timber mafia" openly move shipments without fear of reprisal. Quite simply, they're destroying Europe's green lungs.

Reporter Amelia Jenne joins conservationists who are risking their lives to stop the corruption and protect the wooded areas that are vital to fight climate change. However, this can be a dangerous activity as she discovers when she meets whistle-blowers who've received beatings and death threats for daring to speak out against government officials and loggers. JR

DRAMA Granite Harbour

8.00pm (Thu 10pm BBC Scotland) BBC1 Full series via iPlayer now

The budget must have been blown on Bart's extensive neckerchief collection because cash to stage last week's car crash was in short supply. In the aftermath of air bags inflating in people's faces, we see Lindo leaving the scene when he should be staying put. "Take an order for once in your life," boss Cora Macmillan tells him at one point later in the episode. What? And rob him of his one defining character trait?

In this perfunctory finale, we see Grace Mcfadden (aka Evil Kirsty Wark) losing her temper with a family member, while DI Jay Mallick earns the ire of his superiors. Voices are raised, but it's doubtful the pulse rates of viewers will spike. DAVID BROWN

TRAVEL The Big Steam Adventure

8.00pm Channel 5 Catch up: My5 There are times when this series feels like a kind of wheezy, slow-motion Top Gear where the vehicles are older and heavier – as are the presenters. John Sergeant, Peter Davison and Paul "Piglet" Middleton rarely get much above walking speed but the magnificent machines that take them across Dorset this week are in peak condition and steeped in romance.

There's a Foden omnibus, an 1895 T3-class locomotive that has covered 1.5m miles in its day and a beautiful cider wagon. If they don't appeal, just soak up the lovely views of Dorset, which John recalls fondly from 1950s holidays. Pausing for refreshments at an old-fashioned sweetshop, Peter buys the perfect treat for him: a gobstopper. DAVID BUTCHER

DRAMA The Twelve: Cinderella Murder

9pm More4 Catch up: C4 streaming This Belgian crime series is so cleverly. patiently constructed. In the main we are following a murder trial, where either a husband, a stepdaughter or both are responsible for a woman being found dead at the bottom of a flight of stairs. That's engrossing enough, especially in a court system that works differently from ours, with more agency handed to jurors. But we also follow those jurors home to watch them fight their own secret battles – and, this week, they start to form friendships with each other that finesse their characters further. With flashbacks filling in the backstory of the crime and a profound shock on the way, it's a serious hour of quality drama. JACK SEALE

Conor (Alex Murphy) was only out of prison a week before being sent straight back inside. Although this time, his stretch doesn't turn out to be three years, but three seconds.

He's released once more in the opening moments of this episode, extolling the virtues of Cork having its own jail ("so you don't have to walk far when you get let out"). Not that he wants to end up there a third time. Instead, he's determined to pass his Leaving Cert (the Irish equivalent of a school leaver's exam). Does this mean he's growing up? Maybe. Or does he just want to win a €1,000 bet against nemesis Gavin (Daniel Power), who doesn't think Conor can do it? FRANCES TAYLOR

PANEL SHOW

10.00pm (not Wales) BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

The "U" series has been a vintage one, so these best-of compilations are proving most entertaining. Host Sandi Toksvig and part-of-thefurniture Alan Davies are joined by a rotating cast of comics, all trying to avoid the dreaded klaxon. How is Sara Pascoe helped by her Aunt Julie's feet? Why is David Mitchell enraged by modern chocolate? How many owls has Rhod Gilbert met? Why does Zoe Lyons pity the puffer fish? Why does Bill Bailey's mother approve of Hitler? And which notable Belgian would Joe Lycett make his boyfriend? This is the final episode of the 21st series, so savour its giddy mix of wit, wisdom and guite interesting trivia. MICHAEL HOGAN

DOCUMENTARY

Hidden Treasures of the National Trust

9.00pm (9.30pm Wales) BBC2 Catch up via iPlayer

The opulent country houses of Polesden Lacey and Cliveden have much in common. Both are within 30 miles of London, and both were used for entertaining on an epic scale by their owners: super-rich socialite and philanthropist Margaret Greville and the equally wealthy Nancy Astor, the political hostess and the first woman to take her seat in parliament.

We join the NT volunteers cleaning stonework at Cliveden ("a real Forth Bridge job," says one) and the team "bringing the bling" back to Polesden Lacey's clocktower but central to tonight's episode is the conservation work on the stunning portraits of the two women, both undergoing conservation that will hopefully solve some of the paintings' mysteries. The series is such a winning mix of history and restoration, I imagine NT visitor numbers will rocket. JR

FILM OF THE DAY

The Imitation Game ★★★★ 10.40pm-12.30am BBC1 (starts 11.10pm in Wales)

SIOPIC Director Tyldum Morten's absorbing drama stars Benedict Cumberbatch as Alan Turing, the genius cryptographer who cracked the infamous Enigma code during the Second World War. While the script doesn't allow much exploration of Turing's homosexuality, it keeps you gripped as it explores the brilliant mind and singular methods of the unfairly treated war hero. The Oscar-nominated Cumberbatch is outstanding in the lead, and there's excellent support from Charles Dance as his boss and Keira Knightley as his confidante and fiancée. VICTORIA LUXFORD (UK/US 2014. col/BW. HD)

The Winslow Boy ★★★★ 11.00am-1.20pm Film4

DRAMA Terence Rattigan's stage success gets an assured transfer to the screen, with Robert Donat giving a wonderful performance as the barrister defending a naval cadet charged with theft. Rattigan's tightly wound text is left largely untouched, but the scenes are broadened out by director Anthony Asquith to give the original play room to breathe. SUE HEAL (UK 1948, BW, HD)

Ladies Who Do ★★ 2.50-4.30pm

Talking Pictures TV

COMEDY Peggy Mount is joined by fellow sitcom stalwarts Miriam Karlin and Dandy Nichols, playing a trio of charladies who make a killing on the stock market through the tips they find among office rubbish. With Harry H Corbett in support, this should have been quite amusing, but the cast is hampered by a ponderous script and flat direction.

DAVID PARKINSON (UK 1963, BW)

Dead Reckoning ★★★★
3.20-5.25pm Film4

FILM NOIR The plot of this hard-boiled thriller is very ordinary – war veteran Humphrey Bogart tries to find out who killed his buddy – but the dialogue is as sharp as a razor. Co-star Lizabeth Scott is suitably sultry as a duplicitous dame, while director John Cromwell wisely steps back and lets his cast get on with it. TONY SLOMAN (US 1947, BW, HD)

Bandidas ★★★ 7.05-9.00pm Great Movies

COMEDY Set in 1890s
Mexico, this lively movie sees
Salma Hayek and Penélope Cruz don their Stetsons and turn bank robbers. Hunting them down is Steve Zahn's investigator, who soon becomes a romantic target for both women. It's not exactly The Wild Bunch, but a cowgirl comedy is still a refreshingly unconventional proposition. JAMES MOTTRAM
(Fr/Mex/US 2006, edited for content)

The Invisible Man ★★★★ 9.00-11.25pm ITV2 18

HORROR Elisabeth Moss gives a superb performance here as an architect who insists her abusive boyfriend faked his own death and is terrorising her after gaining the power of invisibility. Director Leigh Whannell's screenplay is more Hitchcock than HG Wells, and he uses special effects sparingly to enhance a narrative peppered with twists. TERRY STAUNTON (US 2020, violence, swearing, HD)

COMEDY This is an acerbic, snappily written account of the high-school experience. Lindsay Lohan plays a girl home-schooled in Africa who is thrown in at the deep end when she moves to America. As well as befriending the geek clique, she infiltrates the troika of popular girls, led by Rachel McAdams.

Drama: The Man Who Fell to Earth Sunday 3.00pm Radio 4

I can't resist a smile when Christopher Eccleston says, "I've never been a huge fan of sci-fi, with the exception of The Leftovers [the US sci-fi drama series in which he appeared] and Blade Runner. As a 17-year-old, I enjoyed the stories of HG Wells."

Any other TV titles come to mind? Apparently not, so despite his time in 2005 playing one of the screen's greatest sci-fi figures who ever travelled in a Tardis, we move on. Regardless, Eccleston sounds as enthusiastic as any fully paid-up fan of the genre, saying, "It offers the opportunity for parallels, satires, to examine what it is to be human. It gives us an opportunity to look at ourselves through a different lens, which is always welcome."

Everything he describes is evident in Radio 4's adaptation of The Man Who Fell to Earth, the classic sci-fi novel by Walter Tevis (who also wrote The Hustler and The Queen's Gambit), in which an alien arrives in our midst, assumes human disguise, calls himself Thomas Newton and sets about saving a handful of survivors on his own planet, and possibly ours as well.

'There are huge painful parallels with the climate crisis'

The book was first published in 1963 (the same year Doctor Who started, a neat coincidence we also don't mention) at the height of the Cold War, and has been brought to screen several times, most famously in the 1976 film starring a suitably unearthly-looking David Bowie; it also recently inspired a TV sequel of sorts starring Chiwetel Ejiofor and Bill Nighy. Tevis's work has always been considered to belong in the top league of sci-fi stories and, for Eccleston, this adaptation is timely.

"He's coming from a planet exhausted by a series of nuclear wars, and no doubt by exploitation of the planet's natural resources, which we're dealing with now with the climate crisis and global warming," he says. "There are huge painful parallels there."

While Harry Treadaway plays the troubled alien of the title, Eccleston is typically committed as his only friend, scientist Nathan Bryce, complete with an American accent that the distinctively northern-vowelled actor perfected after only three days' preparation for the role, once another actor dropped out.

He explains: "I was made aware of the job on a Friday and recorded it on a Monday. There was not much time to prepare, but I just went in and

HIS WEEK'S RADIO LOVING THE ALIEN Eccleston plays a scientist who befriends a visitor from another planet So why is Christopher Eccleston once again dabbling in the extraterrestrial in one of the genre's most haunting stories? PACE ODDIT as alien Thomas Newton in the 197 film adaptation did my best. I'm examine his brain, they dehumanise him, treat of The Man Who not somebody him purely as an object. It's a satire on humaniwho's going to look for inspiration - like everybody else I steal, but I do it unconsciously, go with my instincts and my imagination."

Despite the lack of time for any research, Eccleston says he has always loved the book, and its themes are clearly close to his heart. "It's dealing with man's inhumanity to an alien, and man's inhumanity to a man," he reflects. "He's assumed all our trappings, and he's destroyed by our curiosity, callousness and insensitivity."

Newton appears to me as a messianic figure, his treatment at the hands of Earth's state-sponsored figures evidence of their willingness to put science and commercial gain ahead of humanity. Eccleston agrees. "There's a Christ parallel. He's treated not unlike we are told Christ was. They ty's thirst for knowledge and the disasters that can accompany cash for curiosity."

s the father of two young children who are not yet teenagers, Eccleston feels the weight of what future risks may come as technology's great march goes unchecked. "The influences of social media are a result of our technological advances [and] are of huge concern to me. I grew up without such basic factors of distraction and pressure. I'm very concerned about that, and about the planet."

Finally, I ask Eccleston what he would say to an alien, were he to encounter one himself. He muses for a while, before giving a small but also large answer: "I'd ask them for peace."

COMEDY Tony Hancock 100 Sunday from 5.00pm Radio 4 Extra

The tireless fans of Tony Hancock won't rest until all the comedian's lost programmes have been returned to the archive. On his 100th birthday, here, among more familiar offerings, is a treasure trove of recently recovered gems. They include an episode of Star Bill, which went out live in coronation week 1953. It was Hancock's last starring radio vehicle before he and writers Ray Galton and Alan Simpson teamed up again for Hancock's Half Hour, which began the next year. A lost episode with Harry Secombe has also been found. Read on

CURRENT AFFAIRSThe Rest Is Politics: US

BBC journalist Katty Kay feels like she has lived with Donald Trump "day and night" since 2015. She is not the only one. But for those glued to the former president's rollercoaster career, this spin-off show from the Goalhanger stable will be difficult to resist. Every week, Kay will be joined by Trump ally-turned-critic Anthony Scaramucci for a detailed probe of US politics. In a crowded market, it will be the unique insights of "the Mooch" into Trump's mind that keep this podcast trending. TOM GOULDING

Green Wing: Resuscitated

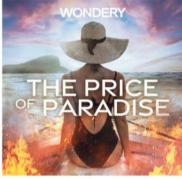

It's 20 years since *Green*Wing ruled Friday night TV and now the same cast (Olivia Colman, Stephen

Mangan, Tamsin Greig, Julian Rhind-Tutt, Mark Heap and a bunch of others who are every bit as good) reassemble for a six-part series, available only to Audible subscribers. This catches up with all the main characters in middle age to find out how they've climbed the greasy pole of the health service without being struck off or, more likely, cancelled and to see if they still have the hots for each other. (Well, what do you think?) Anyone missing the zany pacing and funhouse-mirror editing that once graced the telly version can have some additional fun with the narration speed button. DAVID HEPWORTH

SELF-HELP Exhibit A

Turn down your hyper-critical inner voice for this series. Host Abbey Clancy is not presenting Question Time. She's a mother of four who wants answers and advice on matters that affect us all, starting with the impact of stress, anxiety and overwhelming worry. It's the expert guests that make this, and "happiness guru" Mo Gawdat and mindfulness coach Alice Law are so open about the tragedies that led them to make a life shift that this is a breath of fresh air in the crowded self-help sphere. ANNA JONES

The Price of Paradise

Presenter Alice Levine tells the story of bolshy ex-Bunny girl Jayne Gaskin, who swaps dull English village life for a too-good-to-be-true Nicaraguan island, bought online. A reality crew follows Gaskin on this spectacular folly as she tangles with protesters, gunmen, conservationists and politicians and faces a formidable adversary in human rights lawyer Maria Acosta. Podcasting pro Levine milks the extraordinary events for every drop of drama and leavens it with wit. EMMA SIMMONDS

SOCIAL HISTORY

The Curious History of Your Home

For fans of domestic historian Ruth Goodman's style, here's a series devoted to why we live the way we do. Each episode focuses on an apparently mundane aspect of the home that you may not have given much thought to and traces its past back to the beginning. Wallpaper is one such item, which, Goodman says, caused the deaths of Victorian children by arsenic poisoning. Other fundamentals of daily life into which she delves include the fridge and dish-washing. FIONA HUGHES

Heroes & Humans of Football

A simple premise: each week, Financial Times columnist Simon Kuper and The Times economics editor Mehreen Khan unpack a renowned (or sometimes notorious) figure in world football. Players take precedence (Kylian Mbappé, Lionel Messi and Megan Rapinoe), but there's also a focus on managers such as Pep Guardiola and Arsène Wenger, who gets his own two-part profile. Best of all, Chelsea's elusive ex-owner Roman Abramovich is spotlighted. JAMES MOTTRAM

There's a note at the start of each of this podcast's episodes that the content is for adults only, primarily because of the swearing, which could have done with some editing. CURRENT AFFAIRS The Trouble with Politics

Broadcaster Marverine Cole is upfront about never having been a political correspondent. But in seeking an audience that "feels overlooked by other political podcasts", there's a sense in which her outsider status, amplified by being a black woman in a largely white male world, is a strength. She's a natural communicator who says that when it comes to politics, "we have to get past the moaning". The episode on the recent local elections is a good demonstration of her fresh approach. All you need is love – but you won't find it on music apps

You will not be surprised to hear that both Google and Spotify are offering new refinements to their products that promise to increase a user's chances of finding a compatible life partner on the basis of shared musical tastes.

You can no doubt imagine how this would work. Find somebody whose favourite songs includes an appreciable number of your favourites and the chances are good that you might find a new tune to like. I've done that myself, many times.

What I haven't done is use the coincidence of our liking a few of the same tunes as a springboard for asking another user of the service out for a drink with a view to proposing marriage.

Of all the fatuous notions seeking to account for what makes for compatibility in the matter of life partnerships, a shared taste in music is surely the most fatuous.

HERE ARE MANY reasons for this. If I may be permitted a sweeping generalisation based on nothing more than over half-a-century's hard-won experience, one of them is that 50 per cent of the declared musical preferences of the male of the species are pure self-advertisement – and the worst thing you can do is take them seriously.

I spent decades working in offices where music played and soon learnt that whereas women will say, "I like this one – what is it?", men will not go public on whether they like something until they have first established what it is and thought long and hard about whether it's the kind of thing their self-image would permit them to be seen liking.

The one saving grace of this latest move in the campaign to drain every last dreg of romance from the great ceremonies of life, brought to you by the same people who invented swiping right, is that once it has been put into action no first date will be forced to resort to that ever-awkward conversational gambit, "What kind of music do you like?"

We all know that there's only one proper answer to that question. It's the Beatles!

Everyone must know that Lenny Henry was the 16-year-old winner of TV's New Faces in 1975 (above). Perhaps not always as widely appreciated is just how much he has continued to develop and diversify his nearly 50-year career as the creative force behind theatre, film, TV, radio and book projects. In 2019, on publication of the first of two memoirs, Who Am I, Again?, he commented that he felt he had changed so much he could barely recognise his vounger self. He makes all the jokes land as he reads this abridged version (first broadcast in 2019) of a book that, despite the humour, tackles more serious stuff, too. FIONA HUGHES

"Am I Home?": Life in a Dementia Village

7.15pm Radio 4

Is it ever acceptable to lie to someone with dementia? A care home in Warwick suggests the answer is yes. It has been transformed to look like a village, with a hairdresser's, a cinema and lawn-green carpets, to create a version of reality with none of the unnerving messiness of the outside world to upset disorientated patients. Journalist Lara Bullens, who cared for her mother through her dementia, visits the village and considers the ethics of deceiving someone under your care. DAVID CRAWFORD

The Essay: Music in Bloom 9.45pm Radio 3

In Tune presenter Katie Derham firmly declares that May is her favourite month, when the "summer festival programmes land on the doorstep, competing with brochures full of container plants and summer bulbs...We are a nation of gardeners and of music lovers." This is her introduction to a series of essays on the way in which gardens, plants and music continue to inspire and mirror one another. She talks with a botanist in the opening episode on whether sound actually helps plants flourish. There's also an engaging piece on Friday which asks whether a combination of two of the nation's favourite activities can cultivate wellbeing. Like a bouquet of brightly coloured flowers, this is light and temporarily joyful, but not one, perhaps, for listeners who prefer a deeper dig in this slot. Anna Jones

Book of the Week: The Immune Mind

11.45am Radio 4 Do not be put off by the long list of scientists and their discoveries that opens this five-part reading of extracts from Dr Monty Lyman's new book. They are setting the scene for what is a truly exciting insight into a new frontier in medicine - that our immune system is in constant contact with our brain and can directly alter our mental health. Never has the aforementioned immune system been described so poetically - as blending "the balance of a ballerina with the offensive capabilities of an elite marine unit." This is a fascinating listen that may well change everything from brushing our teeth to using drugs usually prescribed for arthritis to treat depression. ANNA JONES

TODAY'S CHOICES

Hindenburg 3.00pm/9.00pm Radio 4 Extra

With the inimitable Siân Phillips (above) about to make her debut in the new series of Doctor Who, this is a canny piece of scheduling, reminding us, were it needed, of her range of thespian skills. This drama by Christopher William Hill has not been heard since its first broadcast on Radio 4 in September 2009. Its content has become even more contentious since then, although no spoilers as to why other than it involves a thought-provoking glimpse into casual and deliberate antisemitism. Phillips delivers an astonishingly well-balanced performance as a seemingly delicate old British woman, now living in New York, whose past in 1930s Germany is a whole other story. When a young art dealer "rediscovers" her amazing photographs (including the maiden voyage of the Hindenburg), he finds out a lot more, too... ANNA JONES

Michael Sheen Gets into Character

4.00pm Radio 4

It's a smart move to get Michael Sheen to interview fellow actors about their craft. Not only is he one of our best (you might just be able to catch him playing the architect of the NHS in Nye at the National Theatre) so has plenty to say about acting, but he clearly has the trust of those he speaks to here. In the first episode he talks to Simon McBurney and Adrian Lester about Stanislavski's influential System and what impact it has had. You will have to wait for episode two to hear Anne-Marie Duff reveal that as a prospective drama student, she was advised to lose her virginity as soon as possible. FIONA HUGHES

TODAY'S CHOICES

Today

6.00am Radio 4

It remains a badge of honour for a British politician to be invited on as the "big interview" on the Today programme even if they may regret it upon leaving the studio of the most-listened-to breakfast radio news programme in the UK. So, what makes a good presenter for the show? Tenacity, for sure. A certain amount of ferocity or empathy when required. But the key surely lies in asking the questions we want the answers to rather than following their own media-bubble agenda? I have high hopes, therefore, for their latest recruit, Emma Barnett (above). She's proved her mettle and worth on Woman's Hour and Newsnight, for starters, but, more importantly, she wields warmth and wit in her journalistic weaponry, something that the programme will most definitely benefit from. Bring it on, Emma! ANNA JONES

To Catch a Scorpion

9.30am Radio 4 Illegal immigrants are rarely out of the news, especially now with the much-debated Rwanda hill about to come into force and the continued death toll in the Channel. In this timely series, released as a boxset on Sounds on 3 May, the horrors of the people-smuggling networks cramming desperate people into dinghies are laid bare by producer Sue Mitchell and aid worker Rob Lawrie, as they attempt to track down the fugitive head of a powerful gang, Barzan Majeed, aka Scorpion. As their investigation takes them from Nottingham to Iraq, they bravely put themselves in dangerous situations - it can be a tense listen, undercut by the playful cop-buddy-movie dynamic between the pair. Radio 3 in Concert

7.30pm Radio 3 Twenty-year-old Ethan David Loch (above) is a true phenomenon, and a phenomenal pianist, too. Blind since birth, his first keyboard explorations were inspired by Rowlf, the piano-playing dog on The Muppet Show, and he began formal lessons aged only four. Since then he's been featured on radio and TV documentaries, released two albums of his own compositions and, during the pandemic, posted over 40 weekly Saturday-night concerts on YouTube. He's also collected quite a few prizes and awards, not least winning the keyboard category at the 2022 BBC Young Musician competition, where his performance of Chopin's First Piano Concerto prompted the judges to say, "Ethan found orchestral colours on the piano like no-one else can." Tonight, he performs Chopin's Second Piano Concerto live with the BBC Scottish Symphony Orchestra.

Crime and Punishment in South Africa

9.30am/8.05pm BBC World Service

MARK PAPPENHEIM

As South Africa's murder rate hits a 20-year high and given the country is reputed to be the most dangerous place in the world outside a war zone, you can't help but worry about what is happening in the rainbow nation. An underfunded, undermanned police force and a failure of governance has much to do with this "dire situation" but as BBC Africa Eye's Ayanda Charlie discovers, it's leaving local communities on both sides of the racial divide no choice but to set up volunteer patrols to defend lives and property from criminals and drug users who have no hesitation when it comes to murder, including killing off-duty police officers. TODAY'S CHOICES

Heart and Soul

1.30pm BBC World Service The 50 monks who live a cloistered life in an abbey in the south of France - rising at 3.20am every day to begin their prayers, living in silence, working in a vineyard - truly believe in something intangible to most of us, especially those without a religious faith, that their prayers are benefitting humankind. But there is something remarkably calming about listening to this broadcast. Colm Flynn has been granted unprecedented access to their abbey and permission to speak with two of its monks as he watches them prepare a wine that dates all the way back to the 14th century. The sound quality is great, and the editing is executed exceptionally well. Combine this with such a gentle pace and the result is a programme that has genuinely restorative properties. A gentle insight into a hidden world. ANNA JONES

Bowen and Betjeman

3.00pm/9.00pm Radio 4 Extra

This week marks 40 years since the death of Sir John Betjeman, a towering figure in the history of 20th-century British poetry, famed for his defence of all things bucolic. This drama, penned by John Banville and first broadcast in 2014, imagines an encounter between the poet laureate and novelist Elizabeth Bowen (Fva Trout) at a Dublin hotel during the Second World War. Their conversation over lunch meanders over their lives, passions and politics, providing a snapshot of the role played by the artist in wartime Britain and Ireland. Betjeman is played by the inimitable Toby Jones. while Miranda Richardson lends her voice to Bowen, who was a literary force in her own right.

Share Radio

Gadgets and Gizmos, The Financial Outlook. He has been with the station since it went on air in 2014. It went online only in 2017. "Gavin Oldham who set it up really believes that the more people understand about money and are able to manage their own finances, the happier, wealthier and more savvy they will be." CV Born in Berkshire, he was raised in Newcastle-upon-Tyne. He worked at a local theatre and travelled with it to the Edinburgh Fringe, where he met BBC producer John

London (1977-80), "I found myself in the pub with John Lloyd and said, 'Can I have some work?'" He became a researcher and gag-writer for shows including The News Quiz, Week Ending and The News Huddlines. for the BBC Financial Unit, where he

initiated a business news slot on Radio 4's Today. 1987-89 he presented a slot on The City Programme (ITV). Then for about 30 years he reviewed films for BBC local radio stations. He was the first to review film scores on Classic FM. 1994-5, he co-presented The Net for London News Talk Radio. 1995-9 he was film critic for the Daily Mirror. Social media - yes or no? "For Share Radio, yes, but not particularly aggressively. I use Facebook for my proper friends and X/Twitter when companies have annoved me."

Best moments "Hearing a joke I'd written on the radio for the first time. And when Share Radio started. Any start-up is more exciting than going into something that's already been in existence for years."

Worst moments "On The Net I had two people who claimed to have been alien abductees. If aliens were to abduct anybody, these two would be the least prepossessing people they could have chosen.' Off air Lives in south-west London. He has three children and a grandson.

"I'm old and I've taken up gardening."

First radio memory "I think Radio 2 did repeats of Dick Barton: Special Agent; I used to rush home to listen." Favourite broadcasters "Billy Butler and Wally Scott used to do a show on Radio Mersevside called Hold Your Plums in which they would ask simple questions of Scousers. Because the Merseysiders were hysterically funny, it was a famous show. People apparently came from Japan to see it being recorded! Attending one of the recordings was one of the highlights of my life. Wally's death [on 30 April] is radio greats. I still listen now and it never fails to make me laugh." Ambition/Dream job "I would love to present a show in which I play Hold Your Plums and comedy records, the sort of things we grew up loving when such a loss. For fans of Hold Your Plums, he was always one of the

Secret skills "I took up the spoons. If there's a folky or jazzy thing going on, I can play along!" DAVID McGILLIVRAY more people knew the same things."

who set it up really believes that and more savvy they will be."

CV Born in Berkshire, he was raised in Newcastle-upon-Tyne. He worked where he met BBC producer John became a researcher and gag-writer for shows including The News Quiz, Week Ending and The News Huddlines. From 1983 to 91 he was a reporter initiated a business news slot on Radio 4's Today. 1987-89 he presented a slot on The City Programme (ITV). Then for about 30 years he reviewed films for BBC local radio stations. He was the first to review film scores on Classic FM. 1994-5, he co-presented The Net for London News Talk Radio. 1995-9 he was film critic for the Daily Mirror. Social media - yes or no? "For

Share Radio, yes, but not particularly aggressively. I use Facebook for my proper friends and X/Twitter when companies have annoved me."

Best moments "Hearing a joke I'd written on the radio for the first time. And when Share Radio started. Any start-up is more exciting than going into something that's already been in existence for years."

Worst moments "On The Net I had two people who claimed to have been alien abductees. If aliens were to abduct anybody, these two would be the least prepossessing people they could have chosen.' Off air Lives in south-west London. He has three children and a grandson. "I'm old and I've taken up gardening."

First radio memory "I think Radio 2 did repeats of Dick Barton: Special Agent; I used to rush home to listen." Favourite broadcasters "Billy Butler and Wally Scott used to do a show on Radio Merseyside called Hold Your Plums in which they would ask simple questions of Scousers. Because the Merseysiders were hysterically funny, it was a famous show. People apparently came from Japan to see it being recorded! Attending one of the recordings was one of the highlights of my life. Wally's death [on 30 April] is such a loss. For fans of Hold Your Plums, he was always one of the radio greats. I still listen now and it

Ambition/Dream job "I would love to present a show in which I play Hold Your Plums and comedy records, the sort of things we grew up loving when more people knew the same things."

never fails to make me laugh."

Secret skills "I took up the spoons. If there's a folky or jazzy thing going on, I can play along!" DAVID McGILLIVRAY

Age 66 Current job Presents four podcast shows on Share Radio - The Bigger Picture, The Business of Film.

Gadgets and Gizmos, The Financial Outlook. He has been with the station since it went on air in 2014. It went online only in 2017. "Gavin Oldham who set it up really believes that the more people understand about money and are able to manage their own finances, the happier, wealthier and more savvy they will be." CV Born in Berkshire, he was raised in Newcastle-upon-Tyne. He worked at a local theatre and travelled with it to the Edinburgh Fringe, where he met BBC producer John Lloyd. While at King's College, London (1977-80), "I found myself in the pub with John Lloyd and said, 'Can I have some work?"' He became a researcher and gag-writer for shows including The News Quiz, Week Ending and The News Huddlines.

From 1983 to 91 he was a reporter for the BBC Financial Unit, where he initiated a business news slot on Radio 4's Today. 1987-89 he presented a slot on The City Programme (ITV). Then for about 30 years he reviewed films for BBC local radio stations. He was the first to review film scores on Classic FM. 1994-5, he co-presented The Net for London News Talk Radio. 1995-9 he was film critic for the Daily Mirror. Social media - yes or no? "For Share Radio, yes, but not particularly aggressively. I use Facebook for my proper friends and X/Twitter when companies have annoyed me."

Best moments "Hearing a joke I'd written on the radio for the first time. And when Share Radio started. Any start-up is more exciting than going into something that's already been in existence for years."

Worst moments "On The Net I had two people who claimed to have been alien abductees. If aliens were to abduct anybody, these two would be the least prepossessing people they could have chosen.' Off air Lives in south-west London. He has three children and a grandson. "I'm old and I've taken up gardening."

First radio memory "I think Radio 2 did repeats of Dick Barton: Special Agent; I used to rush home to listen." 1.05pm Assume Nothing: How to Kill a Government in 14 Days

New series. Ep 1. Writer Glenn Patterson finds out how, in May 1974, a tiny band of loyalists and unionists staged a strike over 14 days that paralysed Northern Ireland and saw it slide into anarchy, with consequences to the present. Then aged 12, Glenn lived through the event taking place in the context of a "Troubles" conflict which, by 1974, had already seen 1,000 dead. Now, 50 years on, he wants to understand what happened. This dramatised documentary features Ian Beattie, Richard Clements, Jo Dow, Patrick FitzSymons, Jonathan Harden, Paddy Jenkins, Rhodri Lewis, Patrick McBrearty, Aoibhéann McCann. Charlotte McCurry, Marty Maguire and Seamus

O'Hara. Repeated Thursday 9.05pm 1.30 A Perforated Ulster

Face behind the voice

Simon Rose

Share Radio

Gadgets and Gizmos, The Financial Outlook. He has been with the station since it went on air in 2014. It went online only in 2017. "Gavin Oldham who set it up really believes that the more people understand about money and are able to manage their own finances, the happier, wealthier and more savvy they will be." CV Born in Berkshire, he was raised in Newcastle-upon-Tyne. He worked at a local theatre and travelled with it to the Edinburgh Fringe, where he met BBC producer John Lloyd. While at King's College, London (1977-80), "I found myself in the pub with John Lloyd and said, 'Can I have some work?"' He became a researcher and gag-writer for shows including The News Quiz, Week Ending and The News Huddlines. From 1983 to 91 he was a reporter for the BBC Financial Unit, where he initiated a business news slot on Radio 4's Today. 1987-89 he presented a slot on The City Programme (ITV). Then for about 30 years he reviewed films for BBC local radio stations. He was the first to review film scores on Classic FM. 1994-5, he co-presented The Net for London News Talk Radio. 1995-9 he was film critic for the Daily Mirror.

Social media - yes or no? "For Share Radio, yes, but not particularly aggressively. I use Facebook for my proper friends and X/Twitter when companies have annoyed me."

Best moments "Hearing a joke I'd written on the radio for the first time. And when Share Radio started. Any start-up is more exciting than going into something that's already been in existence for years."

Worst moments "On The Net I had two people who claimed to have been alien abductees. If aliens were to abduct anybody, these two would be the least prepossessing people they could have chosen.' Off air Lives in south-west London. He has three children and a grandson. "I'm old and I've taken up gardening."

First radio memory "I think Radio 2 did repeats of Dick Barton: Special Agent; I used to rush home to listen." Favourite broadcasters "Billy Butler and Wally Scott used to do a show on Radio Merseyside called Hold Your Plums in which they would ask simple questions of Scousers. Because the Merseysiders were hysterically funny, it was a famous show. People apparently came from Japan to see it being recorded! Attending one of the recordings was one of the highlights of my life. Wally's death [on 30 April] is such a loss. For fans of Hold Your Plums, he was always one of the radio greats. I still listen now and it never fails to make me laugh." Ambition/Dream job "I would love to present a show in which I play Hold Your Plums and comedy records, the sort of things we grew up loving when more people knew the same things." Secret skills "I took up the spoons. If there's a folky or jazzy thing going on, I can play along!" DAVID McGILLIVRAY om Selleck sounds like he's having some sort of post-traumatic flashback. "There was a white shirt. There was a pineapple. There was an umbrella and flowers sticking out of it. They said, 'Go lay in that hammock and hold that.' I was young and didn't know how to say no. It haunts me."

Happily, this isn't quite #HimToo territory. He's talking about a promotional photo shoot he did for his hit show of the 1980s, Magnum, PI – and the worst that came out of it were "some pretty cringe-worthy pictures".

Not everybody cringed, though: back then, Selleck's hairy-chested, luxuriantly moustached, 6ft 4in physique was the acme of masculine sex appeal. ("That's a little embarrassing," he demurs, "I don't take myself that seriously.") But his discomfort is genuine: "If I had all the money in the world, I'd buy that photo shoot up and make sure it never appeared again. I thought the show offered a lot more than that. We never lost our obligation to entertain, but we did a lot of things I'm very proud of and that were eventually taken seriously. You know, they put my shirt and Tigers hat in the Smithsonian Institute."

I'm initially sceptical about this fact but, sure enough, when I check the artefacts in the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History,

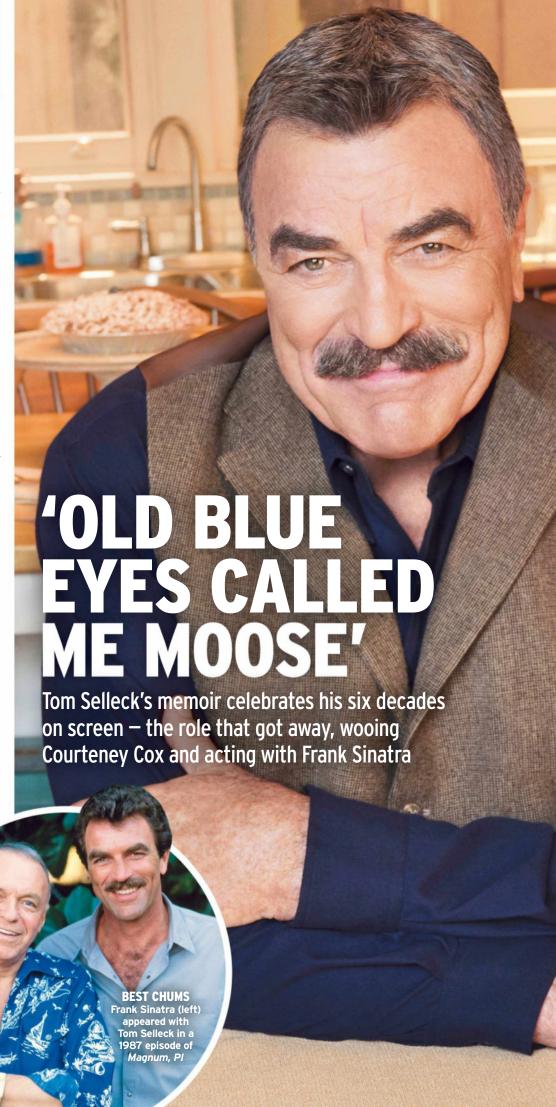

'I didn't turn down Indiana Jones. Only an idiot would do that'

I find – along with the desk on which Jefferson drafted the Declaration of Independence and Edison's first light bulb – Magnum's familiar Hawaiian shirt and Detroit Tigers baseball cap.

Of course, there's more to Selleck's six-decade career than Magnum – his current turn in Paramount+'s Blue Bloods is one of the biggest shows on US TV – and it's all there in his new memoir You Never Know. Which we're lucky to have, because, as Selleck says, "My publicist kept bugging me, but I didn't think I had the kind of sensational events in my life for a book.

But then I realised that a lot of things happened to me that were funny."

Indeed, the book unspools anecdotes involving everyone from Mae West to Leonard Nimoy – though only one co-star gets his own chapter. When Frank Sinatra announces (unasked!) that he'd agree to do an episode of Magnum, PI, it's the beginning of a story that sees the crooner turning up on set with a colostomy bag and a hairpiece, demanding his character "gets to beat somebody up", while reading his lines off a script concealed in a prop newspaper and declining to do any second takes ("He had the patience of a saloon singer, not an actor," chuckles Selleck).

Inexplicably he also christened Selleck "The Moose". (Why? "I don't know!" You never asked? "Who cares! Frank was very spontaneous, and stuff would just come into his head. I was just honoured

One moniker Selleck missed out on was "Indiana Jones", despite the fact he was the first choice of George Lucas and Steven Spielberg for the lead in Raiders of the Lost Ark. So why did he turn Indy down? "I didn't. Only an insane idiot would do that. I'd signed a contract for Magnum, and I'm proud that I lived up to my contract. Some people, like my acting coach, said, 'You gotta get in the car and drive into a brick wall and get injured and get out of Magnum., But I wasn't about to start playing tricks." And has Harrison Ford ever thanked him? "We've talked about it. He gets asked about it a lot, and I'm sure he's sick of it, but he's always been a gentleman about it. Harrison's a very nice guy."

O A YOUNGER audience, Selleck may be more recognisable as Courteney Cox's love interest in Friends. There's a 20-year age gap between the two actors, so isn't that plotline a little problematic these days? "I don't think so. If I'm channel-surfing, I'll stop on Friends - mainly, I'll admit, to see if maybe one of my episodes comes up. And I don't find it cringey at all. They're a valuable historical document of the zeitgeist of the period."

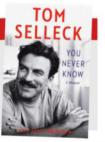

The 79-year-old's protestations are all the more convincing because he's not afraid to criticise where he thinks it's due - as he does with CBS, the channel behind Blue Bloods. "They haven't handled it very well," he says, with a candour unusual in Hollywood. "We'll start shooting the 15th season soon, and at the moment CBS say that's going to be it, the last one. I think they need to come to their senses, though, because this show has a lot of loval fans."

Either way, we've not seen the last of Selleck, it seems. "You'll hear no talk of retirement from me," he insists. "I love the work." ED GRENBY

The physiological links between brain and body

THE IMMUNE MIND BY MONTY LYMAN Book of the Week

Mon-Fri 11.45am Radio 4 Until quite recently, it has been thought that - medically speaking – the brain and the body are two relatively separate entities. However, thanks to recent research, laid out in The Immune Mind (Torva, £22) in an easy-toread manner by Dr Monty Lyman, we now know that our mind and our immune system share a highly intricate bond, something that has huge implications for both the future of medicine and our view on how to take care of ourselves.

THE REMAINS OF THE DAY

BY KAZUO ISHIGURO Sunday 9pm The Read BBC4 Kazuo Ishiguro is known for the hard-hitting emotions he conveys throughout his prose and has been nominated for four Booker prizes, winning in 1989 for The Remains of the Day (£8.99, Faber & Faber), widely regarded as one of the most important postwar British novels. Told in the first person by an ageing butler of a manor house, the story looks back over three decades, reflecting on years of service to his employer and his unrequited love for the housekeeper, as Ishiguro reminds the reader not to dwell in the past but to look forwards to what lies ahead.

ROMANCING MR BRIDGERTON BY JULIA QUINN

Bridgerton Series three available from Thursday Netflix Although it's front and centre in series three of the hit Netflix drama, Romancing Mr Bridgerton (Piatkus, £9.99) is actually the fourth book in the series by Julia Quinn. Following the story of the third brother, Colin, and – spoiler alert if you've not yet watched series one -Lady Whistledown herself, Penelope Featherington, Quinn takes the reader once more into the Regency era with a tale of deception, longing and love. iris (Iris germanica). The original Iris germanica (not striking

from Germany, confusingly, but from southern Europe and the Mediterranean) has those classic sword-like leaves and a lovely purple/ mauve flower. It's the mother of them all, and over centuries has been bred in a kaleidoscope of colours - "iris" is actually Greek for "rainbow" (I'm full of facts this week, aren't I?).

The bearded iris is beautiful in both bud and bloom. Its flowers have three "standards" (the upright petals) and three "falls" (downward petals). I love them when their flowers are backlit by the sun - a consideration when placing - and I avoid mixing together too many varieties. A single variety planted in quantity shortest flowering earliest, and it really is a case of simply picking your favourite colour. "Red Zinger" (around 65cm tall) has velvety burgundy flowers and rusty orange beards; "Bel Azur"

(65cm) delivers pure sky-blue flowers with marginally lighter beards; and the aptly named "Bottled Sunshine" (55cm) is a clear vellow all round, with white centres to the falls. Taller varieties include my all-time favourite (come on, you remember them in my Chelsea Garden, right?), "Kent Pride" (90cm), with chestnut standards, yellow beard and falls with a white and yellow marking. "Dusky Challenger" (95cm) is an enduringly popular classic with deep-purple ruffled flowers and a chocolate scent thrown in.

Bearded irises do best in full sun on a neutral to alkaline well-drained soil, though that some of the rhizome is exposed on top. In fact, if you've got an iris that used to flower but doesn't any more, a common issue is mixing them in with other plants that shade the rhizomes out too much. Give them plenty of space.

Ideally, divide your iris every three years, in autumn or early summer after flowering, tidying up any foliage at the same time. Break off the old spent rhizomes by hand (the older ones will snap off). Then discard the old section and replant the vigorous ones 30 to 60cm apart.

BEGINNER'S GUIDE TO...

Pruning springflowering shrubs

Spring-flowering shrubs (such as viburnums, osmanthus, deutzia and flowering currant) will now be over. This is the ideal time to prune, which will keep them to their allotted space and encourage more flowers next year.

■ The general rule is to prune soon after flowering, so the plant puts on viaorous new wood that will bear flowers

Any large branches or hard pruning should be done in the dormant period (between November and March). Now is for the more delicate snipping - put away those > hedae trimmers!

Always use sharp. clean secateurs and loppers. Remove the three Ds - the dead. diseased or damaged branches - and any that are rubbing. With the latter, imagine the shape of the shrub without one or the other before taking one out. That may be all it needs.

■ Then look at reducing the flowering stems by around a third, and thin out some branches inside the shrub to balance it out and improve general air circulation. ■ Always cut back to just above a bud (not into it) and if a single bud, it should be outward facing (away from the centre) so the plant develops a nice open vase shape.

■ Cut at an angle so the slope is away from the bud so that water runs off it. This also helps the plant's hormones be directed into the bud, triggering new growth.

RYLAN DOES BYRON

"Unlikely Lads" Rylan and Rob Rinder team up for their own distinctive take on the Grand Tour – from Florence to Rome

Rob and Rylan's Grand Tour Sunday 9.00pm BBC2

This doesn't sound like a typical BBC2
Arts programme...

RYLAN It's "The Unlikely Lads do the Grand Tour!"

ROB Yes, this year marks 200 years since the death of Lord Byron, who was one of the great exponents of the Grand Tour [a sort of protogap year in which aristocratic young Britons would complete their education by visiting the great cultural capitals of Europe]. There have been series about that previously by the likes of Brian Sewell and Alan Whicker – but we wanted to see everything with fresh eyes.

I've been to all these places before, but seeing Rylan's reaction to them was really profound for me: to go with somebody who's experiencing it for the first time makes it so authentic, and it empowers the viewer to react honestly to what they're seeing. It's cultural democracy – which I know Radio Times has done a lot of work on – and that, surely, is what BBC Arts is for.

RYLAN I learned so much on this programme, but it's not forced learning. I mean, if someone said to me, "There's this show on and it's about Baroque art and stuff," I'd be like "I'm gonna watch reruns of Keeping Up Appearances."

But what this show does for the likes of me, who maybe thought art wasn't that accessible, is that I can now have a conversation about the Caravaggio and Tintoretto paintings we saw in Venice and Florence. And you as a viewer will be able to sit there and talk about it, too.

The Grand Tour wasn't just art, though, it was also about "life experiences" ROB We really tried to immerse ourselves

Vivaldi, but instead of going to a Vivaldi concert, I conducted one. Which was terrifying, because normally I'd prepare for six months for something like that, but I only had one evening. So I just stayed up all night trying to learn the score.

RYLAN Rob experiences everything from reading about it, instead of doing it. So while I learned lots intellectually on this trip, Rob learned how to actually live life.

ROB I was interested in how Byron was escaping the strictures of Georgian England and experimenting with different identities and sexualities, and the culture of masks in Venice is part of that. I never would have done this in a million years if it weren't for this lunatic [indicates Rylan], but we got into drag, and crossing St Mark's Square I felt confident. Although I did look like Pauline Fowler in a wig. RYLAN He did, actually. But my most uncomfortable moment was the castrati singers in Rome. They weren't real castrati, obviously, but I just felt really wrong. I don't like to throw these words around, but I felt a little bit of PTSD from my X Factor days, about not being prepared, not being ready, having a camera in my face and being told to sing. I actually walked out. I didn't black out exactly, but I don't remember leaving the room.But then the Grand Canal, Venice It sounds as though things got intense. Did you get on, or rub each other up the wrong way?

RYLAN We're like a married couple: we row all the time and we don't have sex. There were some nights when I wanted to smother him in his sleep, but actually we fitted together perfectly, like two pieces of a jigsaw puzzle. We'd both been through a recent divorce, we were both fleeing our real lives – like Byron – and we both needed to push our boundaries a bit. So now I can sit at a dinner table and discuss the Renaissance, and Rob's not frightened to go up to someone in a bar and be dancing by the end of the night.

This show isn't just a couple of gays abroad: because we've truly thrown ourselves into it, it's real and funny and authentic and quite emotional at times.

ROB I'm not embarrassed to say that I was moved to tears watching Rylan see the Venus de' Medici [in Florence's Uffizi Gallery]. There's a beauty there that truly takes your breath away.

RYLAN She had filthy nails, by the way. ED GRENBY

INHERITANCE TAX: THE RULES

How much can you give away without it counting as part of your estate?

Paul Lewis has the answers

HE VAST MAJORITY of us need not worry about Inheritance Tax (IHT). Only one in 20 estates pays it, but people still fear its complex rules: several readers have asked how much a person is able to give away without it counting as part of your estate when you die?

Gifts made in what turns out to be the last seven years of your life are counted as part of your estate – though with a discount if you live at least three years after making them.

'Inheritance tax doesn't apply to money given for education'

So the safest way to give money or valuables away is to live seven years after making the gift!

Colin emailed about giving money to his children and grand-children. He thinks he can give away up to £3,000 a year – and £6,000 this year if he gave nothing away last. He's right, but the £3,000 gift limit is the total gifts given in the tax year. So two children can be given £1,500 each (or £3,000 each if you gave nothing away last year). And the grandchildren? Another rule allows you to give away up to £250 a year to any number of people – as long as they did not get any of the £3,000 big gift limit. So Colin is free to give his grandchildren £250 each (though be warned that contributing to the cost of school trips, clothes, etc would count towards that £250).

Meanwhile, Paul is worried about the support he gives his children at university. He needn't be, though: Inheritance Tax doesn't apply to money given for education of a child including any school expenses. The exemption also covers your own older children in full-time education such as university (but does not extend to money given to grandchildren or anyone else).

Finally, weddings can be celebrated with an IHT-free gift of £5,000 to your own child, £2,500 for a grandchild, and £1,000 for anyone. And regular gifts from income that you do not need are entirely exempt. So if your income in old age is £40,000 a year but you only spend £25,000 on your lifestyle, you can give away the £15,000 balance as a monthly £1,250 allowance – to one person or shared – free of IHT worries.

QUESTIONS? Send any questions to Paul.Lewis@radiotimes.com. I cannot answer you personally, but I will reflect them in this column.

Word of the week Ajar

When a door is ajar, it is slightly open, but where does ajar come in? The original form of the word of the word was actually "on char", in which "char" came from the Old English cerr and meant a turning. You'll find the same word in the London place name

DICTIONARY CORNER Susie Dent

Charing Cross, in which"Charing" is a variation on "cerring" because the memorial cross to Eleanor of Castile was erected at a turning or bend of the River Thames.

Similarly, the now dated term "charlady" described a cleaner who took on a "turn of work" or chore (this "char" is not the same as the cup of char that we might enjoy, which comes from the Mandarin for tea, cha). As for "ajar", this took over from "on char", "on the turn", around the middle of the 16th century.

MY KIND OF TOWN

Forget Doctor Who! This Town (BBC1) was a real between-thefingers watch. As I became more invested in the hopes and dreams of Dante and the gang, I agonised with them at every turn. By episode five, I was fearful that the series wouldn't end well for some of them.

To my delight and satisfaction, it proved to be a joyous watch. I know their futures will be fraught and unpredictable, but I don't care! I had the outcome I'd hoped for. Excellent acting, lyrical dialogue, great music. Wonderful telly.

EXTRA TIME, PLEASE!

As a 70-something granny, I didn't expect to like Changing Ends (Tuesday ITV1/ITVX), but how wrong I was. Not much can make me laugh out loud these days, but this is a rare treat of a programme. No overt swearing or slap-in-theface filth, just gentle humour and a little innuendo.

I have always liked Alan Carr and this semi-autobiographical sitcom portrays him so well. The stand-out performance, however, comes from the young actor who portrays childhood Alan, Oliver Savell. The entire cast gel perfectly and seeing Colin Salmon as the myopic club owner Ron is a joy, as he usually plays such straight roles.

I can't wait for the second series! Valerie Forster Welling, south-east London

Life, death and humanity

Watching Pompeiian artefacts being unearthed in Pompeii: the New Dig (BBC2) was surprisingly invigorating. And yet the series was most memorable for the excavation team's respect for the lives of the city's inhabitants.

Dr Flohr (29 April) drew parallels between families who stayed on in the early eruption and people in the Twin Towers: "Faced with uncertainty, people stick together." His view of humans as social beings was echoed by closing shots of modern Neapolitans celebrating life in the shadow of the still-active volcano.

It's a testament to the production team to have conjured such raw emotion from rocks, and left us with a profound sense of connection to people who died nearly two millennia ago.

MAKE YOUR OWN DOCTOR

The feature about the new Doctor Who (RT, 4 May) was absolutely fascinating, and I particularly enjoyed the "Dressing the Doctor" section with costume designer Pam Downe. But what brought back childhood memories (well before Doctor Who, I should add) were the photo insets of the costumes, with the little tabs and dotted lines around the outline of each outfit.

My fingers were just twitching to cut them out and fit them on to my cardboard "Bunty" doll, which I so loved way back then!

THE INSIDE STORY

Meet June, the costume queen of Doctor Who

There can't be many people who have enjoyed a long and successful career as a costume designer, only to follow that with a whole new one as an actor. June Hudson must be unique in claiming both these credits for one TV show, a series very dear to her heart - Doctor Who. She tells RT, "I feel utterly thrilled and honoured."

June has landed a guest role in The Devil's Chord, the second of this Saturday's new episodes. "I play a lonely old woman who's sitting alone in her flat when she faintly hears this strange music that everybody is transfixed by." Soon she is being terrorised in her own home by "this frightful, beautiful monster" - a deadly new foe called Maestro, played by the American drag queen Jinkx Monsoon.

"I get murdered, of course," says June, 91, with sheer delight. "A very gruesome demise. I think I'm torn to pieces, though you don't see it on screen. The role required a lot of screaming." Months after filming, she was called back to rerecord her wailing in sync with the edited sequence. "They wanted much, much louder screams."

'All Jinkx's costumes are exquisite'

June is actually Doctor Who royalty. For its legion of fans, she's one of the most highly regarded costume designers ever to work on the series. In the late 1970s, she was tasked with not only creating monsters on a shoestring budget, but designing an elegant wardrobe for Romana, the Doctor's

then by Lalla

Ward). For Tom

Baker's final season in 1980, June refined his famous costume with its seemingly endless scarf in shades of burgundy. RT reunited the pair in 2003 for Doctor Who's 40th anniversary, commissioning June to make a brand-new outfit for the Time Lord. They had forged an enduring friendship. "Tom still emails me from time to time," she says fondly.

While relishing the otherworldly freedom allowed by sci-fi shows (she also worked on Blake's 7), June's three decades in the BBC costume department provided more down-to-earth assignments. Think of Mrs Slocombe and Mr Humphries in Are You Being Served? or soap legends Den and Angie Watts, and it was June who gave them the clothes they stood up in. In fact, she had to source an entire wardrobe for every Walford resident when EastEnders launched in 1985.

In the past two decades you're more likely to have seen her on screen, acting under the name Laura June Hudson, in sitcoms such as This Country and Ricky Gervais's Derek. She's the casting directors' go-to "little old lady" in countless TV commercials, and just this year popped up as "Outraged Woman" in the British comedy film Wicked Little Letters.

In April 2023, though, the Tardis finally came calling again and whisked her to Cardiff to appear in The Devil's Chord. "It was a very happy day. I even had my own trailer, and was introduced to the new Doctor, Ncuti Gatwa, and Millie Gibson [Ruby]. Both so lovely."

he enjoyed meeting her modern counterpart, costume designer Pam Downe. "I had the honour of being personally fitted by Pam. She took the time to show me her workroom and all the costumes for Jinkx. Wow, what exquisite clothes! Not only wonderfully designed but beautifully made. I was lost in admiration."

Whether tacking hems in the 1970s or screaming her lungs out in the 2020s, June says, "You use every single ounce of creativity you have, scraping every last speck, in your desire to give everything. You don't want to miss it - the many-splendoured thing. It was overwhelming, really, to be trusted on the show as an actor. I thought,

'I do not want to regret that I didn't give my all' - to Doctor Who above all."

ADJOA ANDOH

The Bridgerton star on her country childhood, being a teen punk and playing posh

What's the view from your sofa? I don't really like things on the wall, it's too dominating, so my TV is on two legs on the floor. It doesn't catch my eye unless it's on.

Who's in control of the TV remote?

My husband and I negotiate. But I love watching stuff with my [grown-up] kids, and then they will be in charge. And when my grandson is here, it's either wall-to-wall Bluey or The Lion King on repeat. The original!

What have you enjoyed watching on television lately?

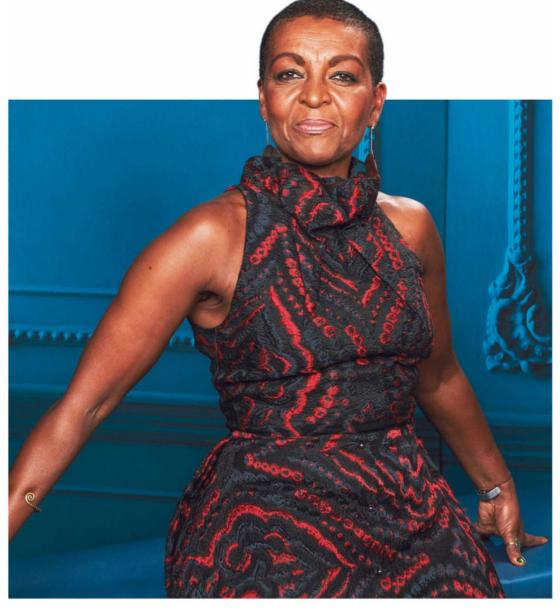

I've just watched the four-part Channel 4 documentary The Rise and Fall of Boris Johnson. You forget quite how bizarre that period was: 52 Tory ministers and officials resigning in 24 hours, the whole Dominic Cummings show, all the desperate sadness of it. But you also get an insight into a human being growing up. You see a small boy whose mum has severe mental health challenges and is hospitalised, and who is then sent off to boarding school. You just think: "How does a human being cope with all that?"

You started your television career in Casualty and EastEnders. What do you make of some soaps losing stars and running fewer episodes because of budget cuts?

There's something very touching about being in someone's living room several times a week and the intimacy of that person feeling they know you. Some of these shows are long-running for a reason, and they carry an enormous amount of affection. It's a shame to lose those bits of our lives that bind us.

You hit global superstardom with Bridgerton on Netflix. Has the show changed your life?

My kids aren't bothered and my dad is still waiting for me to finish my law degree [she left her course after two years to become an actor]. So, on one level it's just another job - the alarm goes off, it's 2.30am, are you kidding me? I think it's probably more among people who don't know me that I'm seen differently. I can be in Paris, or Italy, or Ghana, and I'll get recognised. It's a privilege to be in something people love.

Any hints of what we might expect from series three?

It has more bells on! You get the will-they, won't-they of Penelope and Colin. And as for my character, Lady Danbury, something comes to throw her off her game. It's interesting to watch her scrambling to regain her composure.

You're also currently playing Lady Heather in The Red King, a police procedural about a child going missing on a tiny Welsh island. It's a story that might have once been very focused on white people's experiences, but this is more diverse. What does that add?

I grew up in a tiny village in the Cotswolds. We make all these assumptions about people of colour,

TV SNACK I like raw almonds - and a large vodka.

MOVIE

MEMORIES The first film I saw was Annie Get Your Gun, sitting crosslegged on the floor as a kid in the village hall. Somebody's dad would put up their slide projector that they live in urban environments, not rural ones. And that may be true to a degree, but it's not the whole story. So I love seeing a character of colour who has grown up in a rural community, because that was my childhood.

You were a punk as a teenager - do you think the punk Adjoa would find it funny that you've developed a reputation for playing titled ladies?

She would go: "Get in, fill your boots!" I grew up in an era where girls eating on the street was considered "common", where nice girls didn't smoke. I loved seeing women like Poly Styrene and Siouxsie Sioux going, "You know what? This is what I want to do." Now, in Bridgerton, I'm playing a titled lady - and I'm playing her the colour I am, and she has a cane, her tailoring is quite masculine and you see her having the odd fag. That punk quality is still there in the characters I'm playing. KATE LLOYD
